NAZIS WARN AID TO BRITAIN MAY CAUSE WAR ON U. S.

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (AP)—German conjecture centered today on the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo attitude under the new world-front military pact toward any United States deal to use Britain's Singapore naval base and toward continued aid to Britain in arms and munitions.

Supplying arms and munitions to Britain may or may not bring a conflict with the three members of the new pact, authorized sources said, adding that it depends on whether such help is likely to affect decisively the progress of the war.

They said, for instance, that trading 50 destroyers for bases in British Western Hemisphere territories doesn't mean a conflict.

"The pact is directed against the spirit of intervention and widening of the conflict," these sources continued.

STILL WEIGH ARMS AID

"Supplying arms is one manifestation of the interventionist spirit. Just when and whether furnishing instruments of war leads to open conflict with the contracting parties of the three-power pact is presently a theoretical question."

Asked whether the listing of Europe and Africa as the sphere for Axis leadership and greater East Asia as Japan's mean that the Axis was disinterested in South America, authorized quarters said:

"We have never opposed your American Monroe Doctrine. We have no desire or intention to extend our defensive frontiers, say, to the waters of the Amazon.

"We have never thought of interfering with political forms or manifestations within the area affected by the Monroe Doctrine and do not intend to do so in the future."

BRITAIN SEES U. S. CLOSER

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP)—The British press, almost without exception, took the view today that the chief effect of the new German-Italian-Japanese alliance was to link the United States more closely to Britain.

The Daily Mail attached great significance to the conference in Washington yesterday between President Roosevelt and Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, declaiming:

"The announcement of the conference strengthened authoritative but unofficial reports that an agreement of vital importance between the British empire and the United States has been almost completed."

Most editorials expresed belief that the three-power pact was aimed directly at the United States, and gave great space to reports of the American reaction.

The News Chronicle placed the New York reaction story ahead of the account of the pact signing itself, under the headlines:

"Roosevelt sees Lothian"; "Defense officials meet in Washington"; "Cordell Hull says 'It's clear now'."

Editorially, the News Chronicle hinted at American entry in the war with the statement:

"If the English speaking world has taken on all aggressors at once it will survive and win.

TheMail said "Neither Britain nor America will quail before Ribbentrop's bluster about a 'new order' backed by 250,000,000 people."

1000 German Planes In New Raid on London

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP)—German warplanes roared over London this afternoon giving the city its second air raid alarm since dawn. The rattle of machine gun fire could be heard overhead, indicating that the Nazi raiders were being engaged by British fighters.

Earlier, the Nazis climaxed their third week of unrelenting air siege of Britain with a furious overnight assault that left new ruins smouldering today in London and uncounted other towns of England, Scotland and Wales.

The British said, however, that the latest raids had cost the Germans dearly. They estimated that the Nazis lost 133 planes yesterday, bringing their total losses for September to more than 1000 for the second successive month.

Authoritative sources reported "large scale attacks on enemy invasion forces" on the continental coast had been carried out by the Royal Air Force as well as attacks on communications in western Germany. No details of the damage inflicted have been received as yet, it was said.

Cloud-darkened skies hid the number of German planes sent at England in almost endless procession during the night, but observers said they kept to the recently stepped-up pace of attack.

The force of the latest air blows at Britain was illustrated by reports of observers that at least 1000 German planes were launched at London alone yesterday.

One great wave of raiders seen trying to smash through the Kent coast defense apparently included 300 bombers and an escort of nearly 500 fighting Messerschmitts.

Twice in the early hours this morning, raiders penetrated to the center of the repeatedly-bombed capital.

They were met by anti-aircraft barrages described as the heaviest yet fired in London's determined defense. At least one bomber was seen smashed by the shell bursts over the city.

Others, caught momentarily in searchlight beams, seemed damaged by the thunderous fire that at times drowned out the sound of exploding bombs.

Some heavy explosives smashed again into the heart of London, and caused a number of fires. These and the flash of explosives, lit southeast London as bright as day for a short time.

Large squads of firemen worked

AMERICAS UNITED BY U. S. PACT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—Senator Pittman (D.), of Nevada, citing ratification of the treaty of Havana as new proof of Pan-American solidarity, declared today that the Western Hemisphere nations are prepared to meet "any aggression" which might arise from the German-Italian alliance with Japan.

The Senate ratified the treaty by voice vote yesterday shortly after announcement in Berlin that Japan had lined up formally with the Axis powers in an agreement which pledged the three nations to assist each other in the event any of them was attacked by a new enemy in the European or Chinese wars.

The Havana treaty provides specifically that the 21 American nations will act jointly against the transfer of sovereignty of European possessions in this hemisphere to

Hopkins Seen Next Mate of Betsy Cushing

Vincent Astor and his bride, Brookline's Mary Cushing, honeymoon-cruised along the New England coast in the Astor yacht, Nourmahal, today, while society contemplated a new and equally-surprising marriage in the Cushing clan.

Next to step altarward, according to whisperings, will be Mary's sister, Betsy Cushing Roosevelt, former wife of the President's son, James.

She will wed Harry Hopkins, former Secretary of Commerce, as soon as her California divorce from Jimmie becomes final, is the prediction.

And what about the first Mrs. Astor, who on Sept. 4 obtained a divorce at Cody, Wyo., from the wealthy Vincent, present male head of an $85,000,000 fortune?

Yes, she too is reported soon to wed and the man reportedly is Lytel Hull, whose wife now is in Reno getting a divorce.

To make the cycle complete, James Roosevelt also may wed Romelle Schneider, pretty nurse who attended him during his illness at Mayo Clinic.

The Astor-Cushing wedding was one of society's biggest surprises — with all kinds of secrecy.

Mrs. Helen Astor

News of the nuptials was so closely guarded that Mrs. Harvey Cushing, mother of the bride, would not even announce the name of the officiating clergyman.

The bride and bridegroom plan a 10-day cruise to allow their friends to absorb the news and then they will return to New York to live at a hotel Astor owns.

It is understood that the first Mrs. Astor will have the magnificent Astor town house in New York and the famous country estate at Rhinebeck, N. Y., for at least the next 12 months.

Heart Whole, But Purse Flat, Pursues Jilter

A jilted Allston waitress today sought arrest of a dark, dapper, handsome salesman in efforts to spare the heart and purse of other trusting girls. In her own case, however, Mrs. Alma McGrath, 30, of Commonwealth ave., desired to make it clear that Edward Schlessinger, 40, did not break her heart.

"$489 HURTS"

"It's the $489 that hurts," said she.

While police of two states sought the former New Yorker, the attractive waitress admitted that it was true that Schlessinger had failed to keep his appointment to marry her at Tremont Temple last Sunday.

"But don't picture me as a heart-broken girl," she emphasized. "I was not really in love with him the way kids get.

"I am really tickled to death that I found out what kind of a man he is before I married him, instead of afterwards.

"Perhaps, it's worth all of the $489 to find out."

Schlessinger has a sister living in Hempstead, Long Island, N. Y., she said, and came here several months ago in a New York car registered to a Springfield woman.

The waitress said she gave him money to set himself up in business selling novelties during the Legion convention. In addition, he induced her to part with $250 to buy an automobile which she had planned to use in a business of her own, Mrs. McGrath charged.

PONZI'S EX-WIFE IS ROBBED OF $1000 NIGHT CLUB CASH

Posing as liquor salesmen, two well-dressed bandits walked into the business office of the Cocoanut Grove night club today and at gun-point forced Bookkeeper Rose Gnecco, the former Mrs. Charles Ponzi, to hand over approximately $1000, the Grove's receipts of last evening.

The victim, divorced mate of the former "financial wizard," was in rear collapse after her ordeal. She first ranscreaming to the street, however, to give the alarm.

The bandits apparently fled through a rear door of the office.

The money, Mrs. Gnecco said, was in a safe she had just opened to count and record the receipts.

One bandit kept her covered with a nickel-plated revolver while the other scooped up the cash bags, she said.

POSED AS SALESMAN

Mrs. Gnecco described the man with the gun as 45 to 50 years old, five feet eight inches tall, weighing about 160pounds. He wore a well-tailored dark suit, brown topcoat and brown soft hat.

The other bandit was round-faced, 35 to 40 years old, five feet six, wearing a dark suit and gray felt hat, the woman bookkeeper said.

According to her story to police, the bandits entered the office as if on a business call. They told her:

"We're liquor salesmen. We've several cases of whiskey to deliver. We want to find out where to put it."

Once inside, the men slammed the door shut behind them and one of them whipped out the revolver, Miss Gnecco said.

Loyal to her former husband, Charles Ponzi, during the years the foreign exchange wizard was serving federal and state prison sentences, Miss Gnecco divorced him after he was freed and deported to Italy. Her present home is in Union st. Somerville.

Ballot Recount Is Won by Carr

Mayor John C. Carr of Medford, defeated for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor, today won his fight for a recount of the vote in 20 Boston wards.

Owen A. Gallagher, his victorious rival and former Boston street commissioner, had challenged validity of the recount petitions filed by Carr on the grounds they contained signatures placed there without knowledge of purported signers as well as signatures by proxy.

The Boston Election Commission, which had taken the matter under advisement after hearing of testimony, decided that with protested signatures deleted the petitions still contained sufficient names.

Under the law, petitions must contain 50 signatures from each ward in which a recount is sought. The commission said it had checked names not protested by Gallagher and found enough valid to grant Carr's request.

The recount will start at 9:30 a. m. Monday in the 20 wards. Wards 2, Charlestown, and 5 in the Back Bay are not included.

Daylight Time Ends Sunday; Turn Clock Back

Tonight is the time to set your clock BACK one hour!

Daylight saving time officially ends at 2 a. m., Sunday, but at that hour most New Englanders will be busily engaged in catching up on that hour of sleep they lost last spring.

Churches, railroads, planes and other transportation agencies have rearranged schedules to conform with the return of Eastern Standard Time.

Red Press Finally Publishes Jap Pact

MOSCOW, Sept. 28 (AP)—The Soviet government organ, Izvestia, and the Communist party organ, Pravda, broke their 24-hour silence today and announced the signing of the tri-party military pact yesterday among Germany, Japan and Italy.

The papers published an account of the signing as carried by DNB, official German news agency, along with a text of the treaty, German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's speech in connection with the signing, and Adolf Hitler's reception to the signers.

Saltonstall Stresses Record at Parley

Sound government is the foundation of a free government and Massachusetts' administration for the past two years has proved itself sound, Governor Saltonstall asserted at the G. O. P. convention in Symphony Hall today.

Gathered to formulate the state party platform and select a slate of presidential electors, about 3000 delegates and guests heard a series of fighting addresses from nominees heading their state ticket.

WALSH ATTACKED

Henry Parkman, Jr., out to unseat Senator Walsh, called the Democratic senator a straddler on important issues, citing particularly his stand on military training by which "the vote of our own Senator Lodge is cancelled by that of the senior senator and our great state is left without a voice in the councils of the nation."

Governor Saltonstall said that his administration's chief objective had been productions of jobs for the unemployed and that for the first eight months of 1940 industrial employment was 11 per cent above the same period in 1925, while the amount of wages paid rose 22 per cent.

"Two hundred and twenty-seven new industries, employing 11,000 men, came into Massachusetts in 1939," he declared, "and the rate thus far in 1940 is still higher."

REVIEWS RECORD

Massachusetts is now third most liberal state in the nation in Old Age Assistance, the governor said, state employment service has been speeded up to that placements in private industry have increased 62 per cent over 1939.

"And the burden on employers, home owners and rent payers has been lessened by lower tax rates in 215 of our cities and towns—the most general reduction in 30 years."

Gov. Saltonstall asserted that in 1939 the general cost of state government was reduced in 1939 for the first time in nine years and would be cut still more this year, without sacrificing state services.

CAHILL SPEAKS

"Against the terrifying background of world events," the governor told his hearers, "the elections this fall have a significance that goes far beyond the plans or purposes of any individual or any party . . .

"Countries abroad have fallen, not only because they were attacked from without, but because they were weak from within . . .

"There never has been a time when a forward looking state government could contribute more to the strength of our country and the well-being of its own citizens. Your present administration has proved its capacity to meet the crisis."

Lieut.-Gov. Horace T. Cahill told the gathering that renomination of five of the state administration leaders was an indication of the unity and confidence of the party, and called for equal support for Robert T. Bushnell, attorney-general nominee.

BUSHNELL ASSAILS DEMS

When Bushnell's turn came to take the rostrum, he opened fire on the Democrats as "appeasers," declared that until 1860, with formation of the Republican Party, Democrats and Whigs had "ducked, straddled and side-stepped the burning issue of human slavery."

Politicians at the time did not want Lincoln, he said, and today they don't want Wilkie.

"Wilkie can and will be elected by the army of Republicans who insisted on his nomination," declared the speaker.

"Change horses in mid-stream? Ah, no! Suffering France waited to do that. We'll change horses before the stream can get to us."

Whether or not he was referring to the absence from the party's night-before-convention dinner of Clarence A. Barnes, defeated candidate for the attorney-general nomination, Bushnell bid for unity with the words:

"I am glad that we can now go forward in solid ranks, not only without bitterness and rancor, but perhaps even with some additional mutual respect for having fought through a hard contest honorably lost and cleanly won."

Her husband whipped her only a week before her baby was born.

This was the charge of Mrs. Ethel M. Drew of Bancroft ave., Reading, whose suit for divorce from Richard F. Drew was under advisement today by Judge Joseph M. Monahan, of Middlesex Probate Court.

Mrs. Drew, petite and attractive brunette, charged her husband with cruel and abusive treatment in a contested suit.

Drew, a former bookkeeper in the State banking department, countered with the charge that, his wife once threatened him with a carving knife.

In Suffolk Probate Court, Mrs. Bella Tatelman, 24, of Carol ave., Brighton, won an uncontested divorce from her husband, Harris, after she testified he had closed up his business a week after her marriage.

Democrat Youth Hears F. D. Plea

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 28 (AP)—President Roosevelt in a message to young Democrats assembled here in a pre-election rally, asserted "there always will be two parties in this country, and that while their names may change, the issues between them are definite."

Speaking through his son, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., the chief executive told the young Democratic clubs of America last night that "inevitably the struggle must be between the forces of liberalism and the forces of reaction."

This struggle, he added, "will go on as long as selfishness finds a place in the heart of man."

The young Democrats prepared to close their rally today and swing immediately into the national political campaign.

WILLKIE GREETED BY INDIAN IN SO. DAKOTA

WILLKIE DECLARES F.D. DESTROYS DEMOCRACY

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 28 (AP)—Speaking in the home state of the La Follettes, Wendell L. Willkie charged that President Roosevelt "went through the mockery of seeking to preserve democracy," but used the influence of the presidency "to destroy it."

The Republican presidential nominee, addressing an applauding crowd in the University of Wisconsin Fieldhouse, referred to Roosevelt's attempt to defeat opposition members of Congress in 1938, and then added:

"The theory of American government is that there should be three separate coordinate branches.

"Yet the President of the United States did not like the way members of both the House and the Senate voted, and therefore he put on the purge.

"Thus he went through the mockery of seeking to preserve democracy but using the influence of the presidency to destroy it."

Contending that the administration had "used funds appropriated by Congress to influence Congress to appropriate more funds in the same manner," the candidate said he could give numerous examples of how the present administration has "concentrated power in its own hands," and added, "that is the road by which every modern democracy has gone."

DELEGATES HEAR F. D. LAUDED

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 28 — Democrats of Massachusetts jammed Springfield auditorium today in an enthusiastic opening of their state convention after a night-before dinner at which Paul V. McNutt, administration spellbinder was keynoter.

After a welcome by Mayor Roger L. Putnam, delegates delved into consideration of a score of party planks, among them a resolution to abolish the pre-primary election.

Other planks proposed was one urged by William H. McMasters for payment of $40 a month for those eligible for old-age assistance.

O. K. DEFENSE PLAN

Another was one strongly backing the Roosevelt defense program and still another for resumption of road construction under Chapter 90, in which money is furnished towns and cities by the state for roadbuilding.

In his night-before address, McNutt assailed Wendell Willkie as the "Nation's No. 1 Roosevelt hater."

The Federal Securities commissioner said that Willkie believes in Roosevelt policies and is for the Roosevelt program.

"Willkie just wants to do it better," McNutt stated.

BUCKLEY STEALS SHOW

But the dinner in Hotel Kimball was completely stolen by the man nobody knew, Thomas J. Buckley, successful candidate for the nomination of state auditor.

Buckley was among the missing during most of the dinner and the crowd of 2000 sensed it. Repeatedly they called for him.

Finally he came down from his room and appeared briefly. But his presence stampeded the convention dinner. For 10 minutes, the throng cheered and called for a speech.

The candidate excused himself with a few words and said his speech would be given at the convention later today.

It has been no secret that party leaders have sought repeatedly to have him withdraw in favor of one of the candidates whom he so overwhelmingly defeated in the primaries.

But Buckley, friends stated, is surely going to fight off all such suggestions.

SAVED FROM GAS DEATH

DONALD GOMES AND WALTER CHIACCHIA
Mother's Action Saves Son and Playmate

MOTHER SAVES 2 FROM GAS DEATH

Overcome by gas, a little Cambridge boy was alive and recovering today because mother love knows no fear, or—blood boundaries.

Often in his five years of life, the son of attractive Mrs. Benjamin Gomes of Winter st., came running home with his troubles.

Mrs. B. Gomes

But this time little Donald, near collapse, bravely wobbled in and mumbled a story which his mother did not at first understand.

DETECTED GAS ODOR

Picking the boy up in her arms to carry him to bed, Mrs. Gomes detected the odor of gas from his clothing and instantly recalled that she had seen him and a playmate, Walter "Wally" Chiacchia, 4, going towards a vacant house a short time before.

As she sought to draw from the boy the story of what had happened, he slowly lapsed into what appeared to be a deep sleep.

Calling to a neighbor to watch over her own son, Mrs. Gomes raced to the vacant house and in the cellar found little "Wally" unconscious.

Heedless of her own safety, she carried the boy out of the cellar and screamed for help.

ALARM FLASHED

A telephone alarm was flashed to the police and Patrolmen Timothy Callahan and Henry McCarthy responded in the police ambulance.

Before starting for the Cambridge City Hospital with "Wally" they made arrangements by phone for the fire department inhalator squad to meet them en route.

The rescue squad car intercepted the ambulance in Cambridge st. and firemen immediately worked over the unconscious boy with an inhalator during the remainder of the trip to the hospital.

Meanwhile, Capt. Robert Douglass and Patrolman Martin O'Neil and Martin Kief rushed the Gomes boy from his home to the same hospital in a cruiser car.

At the hospital, doctors said a few moments further delay in obtaining aid for the children might have cost their lives and that Mrs. Gomes' speedy action in sensing the situation had probably saved both.

Binnie to Wed Tonight, Have Family in Month

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 28 (AP)—It's to be wedding bells at midnight for Actress Binnie Barnes.

And after that, it's to be a family.

Right now, the outlook is for a family of four within a month.

For the British actress is to become "mother" to two nieces and a nephew "for the duration." And when the trio arrives, they'll greet a sister who has been in Hollywood four years.

Rosette, 15, is the one who's here. Miss Barnes has sent money for passage for Joan, 12; Edna, 9, and Joseph, 4. She doesn't expect to hear from them until they reach New York, since movements of refugee children's ships are carefully guarded.

Their mother, Mrs. Margaret Wallace, is remaining in England. London is her home, but recently she has been in Dover.

Until last night, Binnie wasn't sure just when her wedding was coming off. A Sunday afternoon ceremony was spoiled when the Los Angeles baseball club won its way into the Pacific Coast League playoff. For Mike Frankovitch, the bridegroom-to-be, is the club's radio announcer. When Binnie heard she'd go to work in a new picture Monday, they decided on a midnight ceremony tonight at the home of the film comic, Joe E. Brown.

She was elated last week when she won her part in this film. It is titled "This Thing Called Love."

"I think that's a good omen," she explained.

Lynn Yacht Club Swept by Fire

Flames of undetermined origin swept the Lynn Yacht Club in Washington st., Lynn, and caused damage estimated at $300 today.

A passerby discovered smoke pouring from basement windows and notified the fire department. The kitchen and clubrooms were chiefly damaged. Firemen prevented the blaze from reaching several costly yachts.

DRAFTEES MAY WORK IN PLANTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (INS)—Thousands of men who register under the new draft law on Oct. 16 may be placed in jobs in private industries manufacturing war supplies, it was learned today.

The National Draft Board in Washington, it was revealed, is setting up a broad policy that production of vital war materials takes priority over conscription of men into the army, if necessary.

With this in mind, officials of the draft board started conversations with aides of President Roosevelt and the labor division of the National Defense Commission, to make the 6500 local draft boards to be set up throughout the country clearing houses to guide men to jobs.

MAY GET DEFENSE JOBS

Told that there would be a critical shortage of skilled workers, draft board officials are formulating regulations that would allow the placing of skilled workers in defense industries in a special group that may never be called up for the compulsory year's military training.

Even unemployed men, who formerly were skilled workers, may be guided into defense jobs rather than being sent into the army, it was disclosed.

Under the plan, men of draft age will be asked about present employment and past jobs when they are classified. Meanwhile, Army and Navy procurement authorities will keep the National Draft Board advised of shortages of skilled labor as they occur.

The word would be relayed to the local boards. Then if local boards had such skilled workers on their lists it would be possible to guide them to jobs rather than rush them off into the army.

PRODUCTION GETS CALL

Thus, a former toolmaker who drifted to Iowa and is now unemployed might be guided to work in a New York state machine gun factory.

A policy soon to be published by the national draft board will state:

"The greatest national need is material procurement. Where the two requirements conflict, conscription and production, production should have priority."

Draft board officials pointed out that there would be aproximately 16,500,000 men registering on Oct. 16. About 4,000,000 of them were expected to be in class one, or immediately available for training.

Boston May Get Giant Navy Yard

Boston today was given the happy prospect of the biggest navy yard on the American continent, a giant plant employing 20,000 civilians. The plan, proposed by Rear Admiral E. T. Tarrant, commandant of the First Naval District would double the size of the Boston navy yard.

A decision has been made by state authorities to give the government 75 acres of land in South Boston, valued at $4,000,000, if Congress sees fit to approve it.

Richard Parkhurst, vice-chairman of the Boston Port Authority, said the Navy Department, Gov. Saltonstall and the State Public Works Department had requested and received approval of the project by his organization.

Beano Winner's Final Number Up

CHICOPEE, Sept. 28—Joseph Zenick of Wilson, Ct., faced sentence here today after short-lived success at beating the game of beano.

Zenick pleaded guilty to charges of attempted larceny at a church beano. Police said he had a blank duplicate of the cards used in the game. From an anti room he listened as the numbers were called out and used stencil numbers to fill in blank spaces. With the final number he rushed out claiming the prize.

Japan Claims U. S. Forced New Alliance

TOKYO, Sept. 28 (AP)—Japanese reaction to the new Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact crystallized today in the view that the United States was mainly responsible for conclusion of the treaty through consistent and unfailing opposition to Japanese policies in the last nine years.

"In short," a highly placed Japanese told the Associated Press, "the attitude of the United States forced Japan to take sides. We have done so."

"Japan's friendship need never have been alienated," he declared, "particularly since America has neither economic nor strategic considerations of any importance in the Far East. We are unable to understand America's concern over areas of the world where America's interests hardly exist."

This source said private conversations between former Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew before the fall of the Yonai government last July constituted the "last attempt" to resolve American-Japanese problems on that basis.

In response to a question whether the economic pressure of the United States' embargo on scrap metal could be considered an "attack" under Article 3 of the new pact, Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, told Japanese reporters a more exact definition of the word "attack" would be made.

SUPPORT EACH OTHER

Article three binds the three powers to support each other with economic, political and military means — "when one of the three contracting powers is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or the Chinese-Japanese conflict."

In regard to Soviet Russia, Suma said significantly "the imperial government intends to adjust its relations to all nations. Russia is closely related to this treaty."

Qualified sources, asserting Japan's primary problem now is to bring Russia into the framework of the new agreement, predicted Japan would make an immediate effort at a rapprochement to safeguard her western boundaries. German help in such a move was forecast.

NAZIS WON'T AID JAPS

Official Japanese quarters declined to elaborate on Article 5 of the pact, which states the status of agreements of any of the signatory parties with Russia is to remain unchanged.

The provision was interpreted unofficially, however, as implying Germany would not assist Japan in the event of a Russian-Japanese clash, because of the previous existence of the Russian-German non-aggression pact.

Emperor Hirohito and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka informed the world that the new treaty did not mean Japan was going to enter the European war or pick a fight with anybody. Both said it emphasized the nation's determination to complete her self-proclaimed mission of establishing a "greater East Asia" by peaceable means.

The Japanese public received news of the pact quietly while the press discused it widely.

AMERICAS UNITED BY U. S. PACT

other European powers. But Pittman, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, declared its significance at this time was much broader.

"It minimizes the effect of the proclaimed solidarity of the Eastern hemisphere, as expressed in the tri-power axis treaty," he told reporters.

"It furnishes concrete evidence that the countries of the Western hemisphere are prepared to meet any aggression with a united front."

What aggression might conceivably result from the new axis alliance the Senator did not say, but official Washington generally regarded it as directed chiefly at the United States as the only potential new enemy of the totalitarian states in either the Orient or Europe.

There were no indications, however, that the course of United States foreign policy would be altered in the slightest.

On the contrary, Secretary Hull said yesterday that the Berlin treaty was not unexpected, and that, in fact, such a development had been taken into account in determining this country's policies.

ROOSEVELT SILENT

And President Roosevelt, who refrained from comment on the pact, entertained new appeals for greater aid to the British. A group of 87 men and women, describing themselves as a "spontaneous crusade" made their appeals and later a spokesman said they were "enthusiastically encouraged."

The President also received Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, and Sir Walter Layton of the Council of British Ministry of Supply.

Upon leaving the White House, Lothian said that Britain's need is for "more of everything and quick."

Moreover, it was recalled that in so far as Japan's expanding military activities in the Orient are concerned the United States only this week extended a new $25,000,000 loan to China and Secretary Hull vigorously stated American objections to the Japanese entrance into Indo-China.

The Havana treaty, designed primarily to meet the possibility that Germany might try to take over French, Dutch or other European possessions in the Western Hemisphere, was signed in Havana, Cuba, in July by representatives of all the American nations.

1000 Planes In London Raid

with shrapnel clattering into the streets and on rooftops around them.

Residents of one London section said they heard a roar of motors during the height of the attack which seemed to indicate that one German bomber had dived below the bursts of anti-aircraft fire and streaked across the city at roof-skimming altitude. The plane was either flying very low or was unusually large, persons in the district said.

But London, still the bullseye, was only part of the Nazi target, and raiders attacked objectives in scattered sections of Scotland and Wales and hit at almost every part of England.

Two towns in the industrially important Midlands were bombed. For one it was the first raid of the war.

2,200,000 Lbs. of Bombs Hit Britain in 36 Hours

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (AP)—German bombers have poured more than 1,000,000 kilograms (2,200,000 pounds) of explosives on objectives in England in the last 36 hours, the official German news agency, DNB, reported today.

Other sources described the Friday raids on London and southern and central England as the most effective yet. The attacks were renewed this morning.

Hits were claimed on an armament plant, an airplane fuselage plant in Birmingham, barracks in London and the Silverton docks.

The news agency also reported a short fight between a German minesweeper flotilla and a British submarine in the English channel Wednesday. Nazi crews expressed belief the undersea craft was sunk by depth charges.

Informed circles said a 4000-ton ship was sunk in flames north of Ireland. The sources admitted there was a 25-minute air raid alarm in Dusseldorf last night, but insisted no bombs fell.

Berlin," these informants said, "it will face 250,000,000 soldiers, with emphasis on 'soldiers,' for every woman and child within these three nations will fight the spirit of interventionist meddling which the pact is intended to ban."

Questioned by correspondents of various nationalities as to just what was meant by "Greater East Asia"—whether it includes the Dutch East Indies and the Philippines—these quarters replied that the pact merely concedes the political leadership to Japan without going into details.

The prime underlying idea, they said, was that of bringing order to the various parts of the world and Japan was recognized as the leader in establishing order in Greater Asia.

DENY RUSSIA AN ISSUE

To the question of whether the Soviet Union now is expected to desist from supplying arms to China these sources expressed the opinion that Russian deliveries did not affect the situation.

Besides, they said, the recent appointment of a new Japanese ambassador to Moscow indicated Russia and Japan were getting together.

Hazelwood Tract Offers 500 Homes

Situated on a high, dry tract of land known as the Old Grew Estate in Hyde Park, part of which has been converted into the George Wright Municipal Golf Course, is the site of the largest FHA development of low cost homes in New England, with production well under way toward the construction of 500 homes.

More than 60 of these homes have been sold since April, with present sales continuing at record breaking pace.

The houses are situated on large lots, fully landscaped, and consist of 5 or 6 rooms, complete with garage, porch, fireplace, full cellar, automatic oil heat, insulated gas range, choice of electric fixtures, wall paper, linoleum, paints, and all interior and exterior decorations.

To carry out this plan of furnishing a complete house, with "no extras" K. V. Wolsey emphasizes that every house sold at his Hazelwood Homes development carries the stipulation that street betterments are all paid—surfaced street, cement sidewalks, sewer, water and gas—and that the buyer definitely will not be assessed for them.

The location is one of the most charming, and yet convenient spots within the Boston city limits.

Homes Popular At Riverside

Hot weather last Sunday brought out many small home enthusiasts to Riverside, which is at Point of Pines, Revere.

These homes, which are extremely attractive and well built, range in price from $3400 to $4250 and have been designed by Gilbert-Varker Inc.

William J. L. Roop, managing director of the Greater Boston Homes, Inc., is looking forward to increased interest. More than 40 homes have been sold.

Crowds Flock To Lake Shore Canton Homes

The new summer colony at Canton, Reservoir Lake Shores, has been the scene of vast crowds who have come to see and purchase at this promising new development. The sector now takes on the appearance of a pleasant, liveable community with scores of cottages neatly arranged on spacious lots.

All during this past week, prospective purchasers have arrived to inspect the property which has been enthusiastically accepted by so many families from all sections of the state. Its location is ideal inasmuch as it is only 14 miles from intown Boston and less than 25 minutes by automobile. Then, too, the fact that Reservoir Lake Shores is within hailing distance of three golf clubs, including the popular 27-hole State Ponkapoag golf course, is an additional feature of its overwhelming acceptance.

Another real factor is the fact that town water is available for every cottage and electricity is right at the door.

"There is a real opportunity at Reservoir Lake Shores for newcomers to purchase property at this season's low prices," the management organization declared. "With September and October usually the best part of the year—scores of families are looking forward to a new cottage at this restricted lake resort. Then, too, they are safeguarded for many summer vacation seasons to come with the knowledge that they 'own their own cottage' in one of New England's most promising lake communities. Indeed, here is a practical investment in health and enjoyment and also from a money viewpoint."

The cottages that are being constructed for fall purchase are three and four-room dwellings with bathroom and porch. Only the finest workmanship and materials go into their construction, the developers point out. Model cottages are open for inspection so the purchaser can see beforehand the type and style of cottage being offered.

FHA Home Buying Loans for Draftees

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 28—Men of military age may continue to buy, build or modernize homes of their own under the Federal Housing Administration's program, and lending institutions may continue to advance money for this purpose, just as they did before passage of the Selective Draft Act, Administrator Stewart McDonald announced today.

"There will be no discrimination by the FHA against men of military age," Mr. McDonald said, "and there should be none by the institutions lending FHA-insured funds."

Copley Comedy Opens Tonight

"Boyd's Shop," St. John Ervine's latest comedy starring Whitford Kane, is to have its premiere tonight at 8:40 at the Copley Theater where it will inaugurate a season of at least six new plays by American and European authors under Copley Productions' auspices.

Featured in the cast are Hiram Sherman, Helen Trenholme and William Post, Jr. The supporting players include Grace Mills, Eda Heinemann, Walter Kelly, Estelle Reilley, Bernice Vert, Esther Mitchell, Trueman Smith and J. P. Wilson.

Heart Throbs in Divorce Drama at Para-Fenway

By DON WARD

Generally the best part of "I Want a Divorce," at the Paramount and Fenway, is the light and amusing one showing Joan Blondell and Dick Powell in those proverbial serio-comic tiffs over hubby's old letters and where he was this night or that.

But there is another and much more serious side to the George Arthur screen show made for the Paramount studio and directed quite skilfully by Ralph Murphy. The telling point is that divorce is not always a sure way out of domestic difficulties. Adela Rogers St. Johns stressed it in the story on which the picture is based, and Frank Butler missed none of the warning points as he worked on his screen script.

The blue, minor theme depicts the headaches in the life of the pair played by Gloria Dickson and Conrad Nagel, who scrap until they are divorced and then can't get away from it all because there is a child to be passed from one to the other.

It is in the divorce court that Joan meets Dick, who is crashing in law and looke admiringly up at the divorce expert impersonated by Sidney Blackmer. Miss Dickson is the heroine's sister, divorced with the help of Joan's and Dick's testimony; but all this comes back like a blow to Joan as she sees how things are drifting, and after she and Dick are married the divorce question becomes a nightmare to her.

Another source of jitters is the gambler-fisherman represented by Frank Fay, who also wants a divorce and pesters Dick to get it for him.

It all works out well for Joan and Dick, but the rest is a pretty sad story. It probably had to be to point the moral. The stars are in good form and there is much to admire about the cast in general, including Harry Davenport, Jessie Ralph, Dorothy Burgess and Louise Beavers.

Another Paramount-Fenway attraction is "Girl From Havana," with Claire Carleton, Dennis O'Keefe and Victor Jory.

Andy Hardy Hit Tops Normandie's Bill

Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, the million-dollar boxoffice babies, in "Andy Hardy Meets a Deb" and "Saps at Sea," with the inseparable Laurel and Hardy, come to the Normandie Theater tomorrow. They may be seen there through Tuesday.

'A London Symphony' Tops Orchestra's First Program

"A London Symphony" by Ralph Vaughan Williams and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in C minor are programmed to open the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 60th anniverseason in Symphony Hall on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Oct. 11 and 12.

This will be the 17th consecutive season under the directorship of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky.

The season will extend through May 3, with the usual double series of six Monday evening and Tuesday afternoon concerts.

The conductor, in making his announcement, promises a number of revivals of special interest for the anniversary season as well as significant new music—these pieces to be interspersed among the more familiar classical symphonies and other works which comprise the usual season's repertory.

Symphonies announced are the Fifth Symphony of Shostakovitch, the "Faust" Symphony of Liszt, Beethoven's Ninth, the "Manfred" Symphony of Tchaikowsky, the "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony of Berlioz (orchestral portions), Bruckner's Eighth and the "Rhenish" Symphony of Schumann.

New works will include Vladimir Horowitz, Gregor Piatigorsky Jascha Heifetz and Nathan Milstein. The following composers have been invited to conduct music of their own: Darius Milhaud, Eugene Goossens, and Arthur Shepherd. Guest conductors will be Desire Defauw and Igor Stravinsky. Stravinsky will conduct his just completed symphony and the little known Second Symphony of Tchaikovsky.

Fig-Leaf Time For Globe Fans

It's fig-leaf time at the Globe these days in tribute to Smyrna's Myrna Dean. Smyrna, as you may remember from your school days, is the home of the fig as well as the dazzling Dean.

Chiquita Garcia

And so to celebrate its first anniversary birthday week, fig - leaves are being generously dispensed. To coin a phrase, what's the cutie cuticles' loss is the patron's gain.

Another beauty you'll spy among the falling fig-leaves on the Globe stage this week is Chiquita Garcia, from "South of the Border," whose dancing is said to have a genuine tamale flavor. Other burlesque charmers are Mae Reed, Ginger O'Dare and Freida West, as well as the 30 Bernardolls.

Jack Greenman, one of the best of the the burlesque comics, is in charge of the laugh department, aided by Vic Plant, Johnny Maloney, Merrill Sevier, Harry Ryan and Irving Benson.

Vaudevillians include the Singing Guardsmen, with Marion Young, Jan and Darling, the Midnight Kewpies and many others.

The film features, from 9 a. m. to noon and 5:30 to 8:30 p. m., are "Hollywood Cavalcade" and "Midnight Taxi."

An "owl" midnight show, with added features, is scheduled for tomorrow night. Next Thursday night's show will include the radio amateur contest. Another feature Globe date to circle is Columbus Day Eve—Oct. 11, Friday—when there will be a special midnight show.

Gayety Offers Beauty Parade

Melonie LeBeau, burlesque's blonde bombshell, heads the Gayety's current revue, "Beauty Parade," in which her latest dance creation is the hit of the show.

Melonie LeBeau

A veritable court of beauty surrounds Mlle. LeBeau in the pulchritudinous persons of Jean Pardou, Estelle Montello, Pola Lynd, Hazel Walker and the King Sisters.

Not at all beautiful but louder and funnier is comedy ringleader, Billy "Bumps" Mack. He has long been a local burlesque favorite. Giving him ample support are two other popular comics hereabouts, Harry "Shuffles" LeVan and Charles "Bimbo" Davis.

The three daily shows start at 12 m., 3 and 8:30 p. m. On Sunday only, there are five big-time vaudeville acts in addition to the film attractions.

Park Ave Godiva For Old Howard

Park Avenue's Lady Godiva, as handsome Eve Arden has come to be known throughout the circuit, comes to the Old Howard next week to arrest the attention of Old Howard patrons.

She and the equally diverting Diane Rowland are the co-stars of this popular West End burlesque house's new stage show, "Starlets Burlesquers of 1940," starting Monday.

Only second to them in attractiveness are the chorus of 30 girls who will offer some unusual ballet and musical ensembles.

There is said to be a lot of good fun, too, in the new show, and Mike Sacks is the lad who'll take care of that. A skilled comic, he is said to be a standout in the coming attraction. He will get a lot of support from Hal Weber and Paddy Cliff, who also have their legion of local followers.

On hand to "dress up" the stage will be Dot Darling, new eye-opener from out of the West, and Diana Johnson, described as a red-headed dynamo and a first-class dancer.

There are to be a number of good specialty acts, including Frank Mazzone and Abbott Company in an adagio offering and the Four Stepbrothers, whirlwind dancers from Harlem.

Others in the cast will be Jean Chadwick, Alice Kennedy, Herbie Harris and Gloria and Jean Barnes.

For screen fare there will be "Rose of Washington Square," starring Tyrone Power and Alice Faye, and "Television Spy," with William Collier, Sr., along with the regular newsreels and comedy shorts.

And, just to remind you, the stage shows begin daily at 12 noon, 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. The regular midnight show on Friday night starts at 11:30.

Debutantes Rally to Aid China

CHINA'S FOUR-YEAR STRUGGLE, overlooked by many in the more recent horrors of Europe, is due for some recognition from our debs and their older sisters, with the organization of the Liberty Belles, brand new relief group composed of members of the younger set . . .

Following the lead of New York debutantes, Nancy and Lucy Cochrane, Margarett McKean and Beatrice and Anne Phillips, daughters of the U. S. With the bankroll reduced to twenty dollars, Mary Colbert of Sunset St., Roxbury, was asked this question and she came through with flying colors when she checked answer "A" which was correct. Today Miss Colbert is ten dollars richer for her winning answer. Haymarket Square was the place this question was given.

Question No. 5—If you bought a ticket for a trip by "Stratoliner," how would you expect to travel?

Suggested Answers:

(a) By sea (c) On a streamlined train
(b) By air (d) In a 1941 automobile

Albert Bishop

The final question of the day was popped on Broad St., Lynn. The first person asked the question was Albert Bishop of Newhall St., Lynn, and he was right the first time when he checked answer "B." Mr. Bishop also received a crisp ten dollar bill for the correct answer.

Olives Ever Popular

By MARTHA LEE

WHEN YOU reach for an olive, you're doing what the Romans did thousands of years ago, for olives pickled in brine were favored by these B. C. banqueteers, the champion gourmets of the day. In fact, pickled olives were found to be a major food item in the buried stores of Pompeii.

The Romans would never recognize the modern olive for it has gone a long way since Caesar seized one for an appetizer. Scientific cultivation has produced a finer fruit; processing and packing have improved with the years.

VARIETY IN SIZE AND IN TYPE

Although they are everyday items on the table, olives have a Hollywood complex when it comes to size. There are small, medium, large and extra large olives, and next in size are "mammoth," "giant," "jumbo," "colossal," and "super-colossal." There are green olives and ripe olives—even green-ripe olives—with a variety of olive sandwich spreads to suit every taste to fill the line. But the least known of all is the stuffed olive family.

The next popular stuffed olive is the pimiento-stuffed one, although there are many more fillings to suit the individual taste. Stuffed olives include those filled with onion, celery, almond, smoked salmon, caviar, shrimp, cheese, pepper and last, but not least, the anchovy-and-caper stuffed olive.

As versatile as their fillings are the uses for stuffed olives, and their newest virtue is that of an ingredient in many a main dish.

PORTUGUESE MEAT AND VEGETABLE LOAF

¾ cup fine soft bread crumbs
¾ cup milk
1 egg, well beaten
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tbsp. grated onion
¾ cup grated raw carrot
¾ cup finely diced celery
2-ounce bottle stuffed olives, sliced
½ lb. ground beef
½ lb. ground veal
¼ lb. ground pork
2 tbsp. butter, melted
1-3 cup hot water (about)

Combine bread crumbs, milk, egg, salt, pepper, and onion in bowl. Add vegetables, olives, and meats. Mix thoroughly. Shape into loaf or pack in greased baking pan. Pour butter over top of loaf. Bake, uncovered, in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 1¼ hours, basting occasionally and adding water as necessary. Serve hot or cold. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD

6 medium-sized tomatoes, peeled.
2 pkgs. (6 oz.) cream cheese.
2 tbsp. mayonnaise.
¼ tsp. salt.
Dash of pepper.
¼ cup finely diced celery.
¾ tsp. Worcestershire sauce.
¼ tsp. celery seed.
2 tbsp. finely chopped scallions or chives.
1 hard-cooked egg white, finely cut.
1 hard-cooked egg yolk, riced.
2-oz. bottle stuffed olives, sliced.

Cut slice from stem end of tomatoes, scoop out centers, sprinkle with salt, and invert to drain. Blend cheese, mayonnaise, salt pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Fill tomatoes with cheese olive mixture. Chill thoroughly Arrange on crisp lettuce and serve with French dressing. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Manners

'Thank You' Always

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Should I thank a man when he helps me on with my coat or when he pulls out my chair for me at the table? Or should I just take these as a matter of course? W.

Courtesy, no matter how small, should always be thanked for. For every consideration shown us by anyone anywhere we should say a gracious "Thank You."

Smart Set Fashions

Beginning of the Century

IT HAS a little of the curved charm of the early 1900's . . . and the peek-a-boo "camisole" of pre-war days . . . but it is without doubt the gay young modern's feminine guise of 1940 . . . Shiny black on shadowy black crepe containing Eastman rayon . . . and below the sheer top bedewed with black sequins is a whittled waistline, and a whirling, multi-gored skirt that's wonderful for dancing. —ANNICE BRINK.

LISTEN, WORLD! By Elsie Robinson

THIS TALK is for women. Women exclusively. For it deals with a pet vice and delusion of the Female Sex—one of the few vices from which mere males are comparatively free. I refer to the universal feminine craving to "have a good, frank talk with the other fellow" when they get into an emotional jam, and their pathetic but utterly futile belief that said talk is going to clear things up.

Which applies especially to rows with one's husband or boy friend.

It has taken a lot of painful experience for me to acquire the facts I'm about to utter, but you can take it from me they're the real McCoy.

If there's one thing above all others which the average person—regardless of sex or relationship—dreads and despises it's FRANKNESS.

There's a fairly sound basis for this attitude. For not once in a blue moon is our frankness the real truth. You may speak your piece in all kindness and sincerity, you may honestly believe that you are giving Exhibit B the accurate lowdown on himself.

But that doesn't mean you are! In fact, it's dollars to doughnuts that you aren't.

NONE OF US KNOWS the whole truth about himself, much less the Other Fellow. None of us knows why he does things, or leaves them undone. He may see the immediate act and think he knows the reason for it, but we cannot know what lies behind that act, what strange hurt or hunger, perhaps in childhood, brought this unhappy harvest in maturity.

So when you have that "good, frank talk" with Jim or Jennie, you're not giving them the key to their own mystery—you're merely telling them what YOU, with your limited knowledge and tolerance think about them, which is usually anything but a treat.

Moreover, even if most of your notions happen to be true, what good will it do to make a record of them—particularly if the culprit on the carpet happens to be a male? It will do you no good, sister, absolutely none, not anywhere or any time.

THERE NEVER YET WAS A MAN WHO LIKED TO JOIN IN A CONVERSATION ABOUT HIS OWN SHORTCOMINGS.

All men have a notion that the best way to handle a transgression is to overlook it, shut up about it and let things slide. Then maybe there's a chance of starting again where he shouldn't have left off. Which maybe isn't such a dumb hunch after all. For these never yet was a Bad Mess that "talking things over" wouldn't make worse.

IF A DECENT man has made a clown of himself, he'll be the first one to realize and regret it—and want everyone else to forget it. And if he isn't decent or smart enough to do this on his own accord, all the jawing in the world won't change his nature.

Naturally this doesn't mean that you should allow the Big Boy to romp all over the essential decencies of life without uttering a protest. But any smart girl can tell all she really needs to say about any man in seven minutes flat. After which you're merely wasting oxygen, lady, and complicating your future relations Something Awful.

So take a tip from one who knows—which of course you won't—and lay off the language sister.

Guide to Women By Fannie Hurst

A revealing experience to take stock of yourself: ask that reflection in your mirror "Just what sort of person really am I?"

In our hearts we all have a vision of the woman we'd like to be—the girl whose date book is never empty, the wife whose husband brags about her at stag dinners, the mother whose children rush to greet her after school.

But just how close do we come to being this homeric woman? That we often falter, that we are apt to let Life defeat us Fannie Hurst, understanding woman author of "Lummox" and "Four Daughters," knows well.

Her own experience has been deep and wide—and from it she has written the arresting booklet "Today Is Ladies' Day." In it she urges women to stand up and start fighting, to get out and be that glamorous person we hold as our ideal. "Make no mistake," she says, "frustration and defeat realization and success are more within the command of the individual than nine out of ten of us realize."

You Can Be Beautiful

'Winter Time' Cologne Arrives Just in Time

By ARLINE GOULD

IT'S SO SELDOM that we come across a perfumed eau de cologne which has the brilliance, the body, and the distinguished quality of an expensive perfume . . . that we take off our editorial hat to one which amazingly has all this and inexpensiveness too!

It's a "wintertime" cologne, which arrives in town this week. While it was created during a past season the choice ingredients in it have had a chance to mellow and ripen . . . which is necessary in the creation of any really fine perfume. This year's crop of wintertime" has a new something about it that is very head-up . . . something you'll appreciate when that new fur hat and muff set you're going to have.

You'll really set off and emphasize your daringly "pouffed" pomadour with the richness of this perfume . . . it's just the type some womanly siren of the nineteen-hundreds would use to get her man . . . and who are you to overlook such a famous example of prowess?

One dollar is the price of "wintertime," and the most fastidious, knowing nose would never believe the evidence it smelled . . . such a fragrance spells dollars rather than dollar. An enchantingly done-up set of the fragrance and dusting powder is $2. A lovely, heavenly blue is the color theme of the packaging . . . like one of those distant, blue skies when the sun comes out after a heavy snowfall. On this tint are embossed winter sport scenes, and a southern cruise scene. The set box is lovely too; the base of the box and lining are a delicate baby pink and the winter scenes are duplicated on it.

If you'd like to know all about it's new "wintertime" fragrance for $1, phone Arline Gould, LIberty 1000, week days except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

JAP-U. S. BREAK FORESEEN

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Clasping of the mailed fist of the Rome-Berlin axis by Japan in a militant pledge of mutual economic and military aid was viewed today as the climax, if not the direct result, of a long series of what Japan considered unfriendly acts by the United States which began with the abrogation of the Trade Treaty of 1911.

Since July 26, 1939, when Secretary of State Cordell Hull informed Ambassador Kensuke Horinouch: that the Administration was terminating the treaty, Japanese have repeatedly manifested their resentment

Licensing of all oil and scrap iron shipments quickly followed lapsing of the treaty in January of this year when the formal six-months period of notification expired

With the path to embargoes cleared President Roosevelt on July 31st forbid the shipment of aviation gasoline to non-Western Hemisphere countries.

GREAT BRITAIN HIT

Great Britain and other nations outside the hemisphere were also affected with Japan, which purchased 65 per cent of her petroleum imports in this country.

It was Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi however, who sped to the State Department to protest to Asst. Sec. Sumner Welles the action which cut off his country from vital supplies

Anti-climax to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact came on Thursday of this week when President Roosevelt embargoed all shipments of scrap iron to Japan. This time the ban applied to all non-Western Hemisphere nations except Great Britain.

In recent years Japan has been buying 40 per cent of its scrap iron imports in the United States. It was the thunder-clap blow that struck off the lightning of the three-power mutual aid pact, foreign observers contended.

Congress and the people of the United States had not deemed a single one of three steps All were taken by virtue of legislation designed, and plainly labelled, to strengthen national defense either economic or military.

Astonishing evidence that the series of unfriendly acts were looked on by the heads of the American people in the Congress was given in edito ial in the Hearst papers of early August 1939.

EDITORIAL CITED

Commenting on the revocation of Secretary Hull o the Japanese American Trade Treaty of 1911 was accompanied by consultation with England and France the editorial said

"This is evidence, however, of a working partnership between the United States and England and France far more intimate than the people of this country imagined existed."

The same editorial recalled the warning of Sen. Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota in May, 1939 when he rose in Congress from a book called 'Propaganda in the Next War,' written by Sidney Rogerson of England and edited by Capt. Liddell Hart, English military authority, this amazing passage

"'The position will naturally be eased if Japan were involved, and this might and probably would bring America in without further ado. At any rate, it would be a natural and obvious object of our propagandists to achieve this, just as during the great war they succeeded in embroiling the United States with Germany.'"

SHADOW CAST

That impending events were clearly casting their shadows before them is further demonstrated by an editorial which Hearst papers ran in July, 1939, which said in part:

"Bluntly, the reason for the abrogation of the Japanese treaty appears to be to clear the way for an eventual embargo against Japan which would serve the interests of the United States infinitesimally, if at all, but would serve the interests of China and England and Russia monumentally."

Tommy the Cork Comes to New York

By CARLISLE BARGERON

(Assigned by Republican National Committee)

If the campaign hasn't been as exciting as you would like, it will be from now on. Tommy the Cork, that veritable dynamo of energy, that man with the brain of a Colossus, that man for whom there aren't enough superlatives to adequately describe him—he has moved in to take charge of the New Deal campaign. There will be ACTION, you can lay to that. In the end, the carcasses of such commonplace Democrats as Jim Farley and Ed Flynn will be strewn all over the place, but there will be fun, and plenty of it.

Tommy, the Cork

There is something about Tommy that embarrasses those who thought they were in charge of the New Deal campaign. They give all sorts of explanations as to just what his job is to be. For one thing, they would have you think that Fiorello LaGuardia is a minor league club owned by the Washington Majors and that players are farmed out to him when they lose their stride.

But Tommy is still going good. He is just as active and ambitious as the time he told Dr. Raymond Moley that he supplied the thoughts and it was for Mr. Roosevelt to follow the tune.

It is a fact that he once attributed his success to not having to bother with a wife and has since become married, but he had simply misunderstood the reason for his greatness. Being "tied down" hasn't hurt his effectiveness in the least.

Say what he may, explain it any way he wants to, Ed Flynn knows that wherever Tommy is, he represents the White House. "Corcoran calling from the White House—" has got statesmen and plain political bosses out of bed at all hours of the night.

'An Amazing Little Worker

Naturally, it hurts Flynn's vanity and the vanity of plenty of others, to have Tommy take over things. But the campaign has GOT TO BE WON. Tommy won't win it but he will have caused so much confusion by the time it is over that Flynn and the others won't know the difference.

In moving into New York, Tommy, of course, returns to the scene of his one and only purge triumph. He aimed at a lot of gentlemen back there in 1938, but all of the purgees returned to office except John O'Connor. Tommy got him—his only scalp. Otherwise, Tommy's activities accomplished nothing except to tear the Democratic party to pieces. Tommy is more responsible than any other one person, perhaps, for the National Committee of Democrats for Willkie. He has been the New Deal's bull in the china shop.

You naturally wonder how one little fellow, only about 40 years old now, could possibly have come to wield so much power. He was just a subordinate in the R. F. C. when the New Deal came in.

Well, his own explanation to his grandchildren will probably be that he learned to play an accordion at college. Mr. Roosevelt with the affairs of state always pressing him, had to have diversion. One Sunday night the Roosevelt youngsters took Tommy and his accordion over to the White House. Our current history began then.

Of course, a valet is about as "close" to his employer as any man can be to another, but Tommy made his "closeness" to Mr. Roosevelt count. We are told that he would play the accordion until Mr. Roosevelt was just in the right mood, and then as Tommy would explain it himself, he would "work" on him.

Cleverness as an "office politician" is really the secret of Tommy's success. And he owes a tremendous lot to the Washington gossip columnists, or some of them. He succeeded in convincing them early that he had stuff direct from the feed trough. And he would come by enough tid-bits to get their confidence.

But most of the time he would be feeding them "poison" against his opponents. Indeed, he would work this both ways. First, he would give Mr. Roosevelt the "poison" and maybe, the President wouldn't be inclined to take him seriously. But in a few days the particular story would bob up in a gossip column, and naturally Mr. Roosevelt would think that fellow Corcoran knows what he is talking about.

Ed Will Have To Take It

One effective job he did was to convince Mr. Roosevelt that Jack Garner double-crossed him on the business of packing the Supreme Court. There is not a reporter in Washington who does not know that when Garner told Mr. Roosevelt the packing jig was up, that he was telling him the literal truth. You'll enjoy watching him operate in the field Ed Flynn thought had been assigned to him.

WHAT THE WEST TAUGHT WILLKIE

(Provided by the Democratic National Committee)

Wendell Willkie's flip-flop on the question of public power may well turn out to be the most significant happening of the campaign.

His speeches in the Pacific Northwest were almost incredible. Here was the stalwart champion of private enterprise, the man who won his political spurs by hindering, hampering, and harassing the government's power projects, actually promising to throw the weight of his support behind the completion of the great power dams at Grand Coulee and Bonneville.

There was not a whisper of criticism, or a low-voiced aside, from the gentleman who called TVA the most fantastic of New Deal alphabetical agencies. Gradually and surely, candidate Willkie is swallowing the New Deal program to the last sour morsel—and the power projects must have been the sourest of all.

Willkie based his endorsement on the plea that completing the projects is simply good business. He said people in those areas should decide whether to distribute the power through private utilities or public agencies. Fair enough so far. But where was his old-time warning that public ownership was destroying private enterprise, ruining business and threatening the American way of life? Where was the rallying call for the return of sound economic principles which won him the Republican nomination at Philadelphia? Lost! Lost somewhere on the long train ride between Rushville, Ind., and Seattle, Wash.

LEARNING THE WESTERN VIEWPOINT

When candidate Willkie set out from Rushville he said he wanted to get acquainted with the people of the great Western States. The educational process took hold rapidly. He found the people fed up on vague words and meaningless promises, fed up on the exploitation of labor by its foes, fed up on the exploitation of the masses by greedy public utilities. Either he had to change his views or they did, and like a good politician, he trimmed to meet the winds.

Contrast his Seattle speech with the statement made in a speech to the Harvard Business School Club in 1935:

"No duty has ever come to me in my life, even that in the service of my country, which has so appealed to my sense of social obligation, patriotism, and love of mankind as this—MY OBLIGATION TO DO WHAT I CAN FOR THE PRESERVATION OF PUBLIC UTILITIES PRIVATELY OWNED."

The sacred cause of the utilities in now forgotten. Wendell came back from the Far West a changed man. The invigorating climate did the trick

LESSONS FROM COFFEYVILLE

The Republican nominee probably had his initial lesson in Western thinking at Coffeyville, Kansas, the site of his first major address. The opposing Republican column modestly referred to this as "one of the finest utterances ever made by man." The copybook maxims repeated by the nominee rarely sparkled but his omissions were even more remarkable.

It happens that Coffeyville has one of the finest municipal power plants in the United States. High up on the smoke stack is a large sign "THIS PLANT IS NOT FOR SALE" which Willkie may have seen by gazing out the train window. If he missed the sign there was an advertisement on the back of the program advertising the Willkie rally, paid for by the Chamber of Commerce which boasted about the power plant. This ad said:

"BECAUSE COFFEYVILLE OWNS ITS OWN ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER PLANT AND SOFT WATER PLANT, IT LEVIES NO CITY TAX WHATEVER. THUS ITS INDUSTRIES, BUSINESSES AND HOUSEHOLDERS RECEIVE THE DOUBLE-DIVIDEND OF LOW ELECTRIC RATES AND NO MUNICIPAL TAXES."

The Coffeyville plant made general profits of $175,000 last year. Over the past 10 years, total transfers of funds from the power project to other municipal funds have amounted to $1,330,602. The city built a new City Hall, costing $225,000 out of power profits without levying taxes.

A CONVERT'S ZEAL

The further he progressed, the more candidate Willkie found his views in sympathy with those of the free people of the West who want their democracy in practical terms. He became enthusiastic in his support of the Roosevelt power and water projects and the Roosevelt social gains.

There is nothing quite so refreshing as a convert's zeal, and Wendell very nearly went all the way. The only thing missing to complete the conversion was a thumping, rip-roaring speech denouncing the wolves of Wall Street.

Ferdinand Pecora, now a judge in New York, was special counsel to the Senate committee which probed and exposed the financial thimble-rigging of Wall Street. Later he wrote a book called Wall Street Under Oath in which he singled out Willkie for his opposition in the holding company bill.

With prophetic vision, Pecora warned:

"It is certainly well that Wall Street now professes repentance. But it would be most unwise, nevertheless, to underestimate the strength of hostile elements. When open mass resistance fails, there is still the opportunity for traps, strategems, intrigue, undermining—all the resources of guerilla warfare. These laws are no panacea; nor are they self-executing. More than ever, we must maintain our vigilance. If we do not, Wall Street may yet prove to be like that land, of which it has been said that no country is easier to overrun, or harder to subdue."

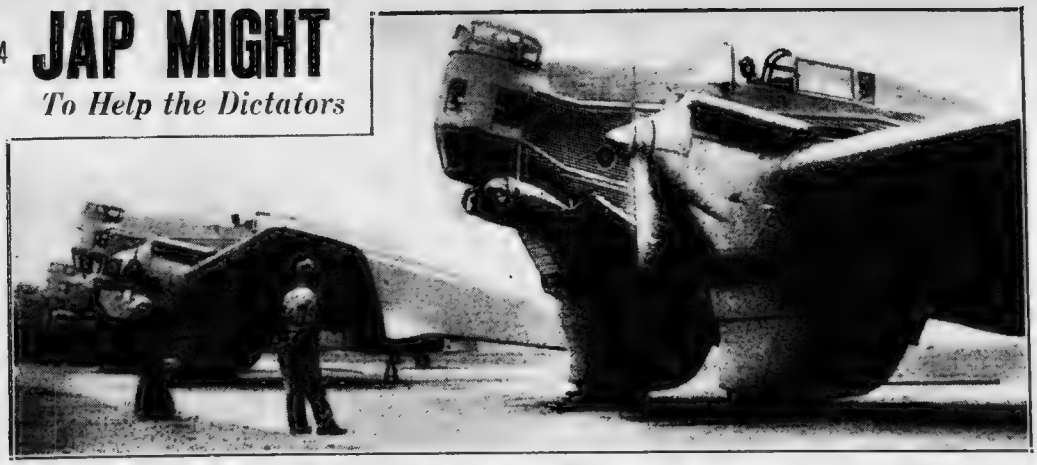
To Help the Dictators



Lift for Hitler—Japanese pact with Central Powers brings some 4000 modern warplanes, like these, to back Dictators Hitler and Mussolini if America enters the war. The addition would give the axis some 35,000 planes, as Germany now has an estimated 25,000, Italy 6000.

Soldiers—Adding 6,500,000 active and reserve soldiers to the armies of the Central Powers, Japan would bring the Hitler total to 20,000,000. Italy's army of 7,500,- is greatest. Germany has 6,000,000 soldiers.

Mikado—On a big white horse, Emperor Hirohito of Japan attends military maneuvers . . . perhaps in the light of a fading sun, if he goes the way of other dictator-managed kings.

Sea Power for Hitler—Adding at least 10 battleships in its 1,100,000 tons of navy ships, Japan will double the size of the Central Powers' combined fleet, almost triple its punching power. Germany has 400,000 tons afloat, including five or six "pocket battleships," Italy 505,000 tons, including six battleships.

THE American people will be vitally interested in, and should study carefully, the program of compulsory arbitration being undertaken in Great Britain to prevent disruption of the war effort by labor troubles.

According to the American newspaper trade journal, Editor and Publisher, this program has been proposed by British labor itself, and is not an exercise of the extraordinary powers conferred upon the British Government in consequence of the war.

And also according to Editor and Publisher, the program is proving so attractive to organized labor in Great Britain and is so plainly beneficial to labor as well as general public interests and offers such opportunities for expanding the welfare and security of labor that:

"British labor leaders now see the possibility that the wartime arbitration has an excellent chance of becoming a permanent part of the British industrial machinery."

While Editor and Publisher has some qualms about compulsory arbitration of labor disputes becoming "the prey of politics in a democracy," such as the United States, it thoughtfully concludes:

"If it could be set up on as non-political a basis as is the United States Supreme Court, we believe that it would provide a tremendous improvement in American industrial relations, with an economy of many millions of dollars every year to working people, to shareholders in industry and to the consuming public."

This is an objective which the Hearst newspapers have been patiently supporting before the American people for many years.

AN EXAMPLE is the editorial comment which these newspapers made in June, 1939, when Donald R. Richberg, former Administrator of the National Recovery Act, declared to the Advertising Federation of America in Detroit that prosperity awaits the willingness of:

"Responsible representatives of management, labor and government to lay down the weapons of warfare, sit around the council tables of peace and do the job."

The Hearst newspapers then said editorially:

"Other civilized countries have developed means of solving labor problems honestly and fairly, and without strikes and class warfare.

"Are we not sufficiently civilized to act as sensibly?

"Why should an entire industry be shut down, and perhaps destroyed, in the process of settling an argument?

"Let production and wages be undisturbed throughout the peaceful discussion of differences.

"Let an impartial and just tribunal hear and determine the facts.

"Preserve every American principle of trial and appeal.

"But let us not divide the American people into warring classes when, as Mr. Richberg declares,—'The overwhelming majority of them want to LIVE AND WORK IN PEACE.'"

AMERICAN LABOR has never achieved anything by violence or the threat of violence that it could not have achieved better and more quickly by democratic American processes of judicial hearing and decision.

We submit issues concerning property and life to established tribunals, with confidence in their responsibility and fairness.

Why should we not have such authority for review and decision in the conflicts of interest between industry and employes?

Labor and industry alike should have every recourse to hearing before that authority, and equal and every recourse to channels of appeal.

The war-united British people are doing that as a war measure, and have found it profitable and useful enough to be retained as a permanent peace policy—when peace finally returns to that sorely-troubled land.

Why should not America, which is at peace now and can remain so permanently if it desires to do so, discard the practices of violence in peacetime which would not be endured in the event of war?

ALIEN REGISTRATION continues to lag in Boston; fewer than 60,000 of the city's 150,000 estimated non-citizen population have recorded their fingerprints and given the required information.

This is hard to understand. Congress has been lenient in its treatment of persons who owe allegiance to other governments.

They have four long months to comply with the law.

On the other hand, young citizens who are between 21 and 36 years of age must register for conscription IN ONE DAY.

But if leniency fails to appeal to aliens, they should not be similarly blind to the harsh penalties contained in the Registration statute.

Refusal or failure to register invites punishments ranging from immediate deportation to imposition of fines of $1000 or prison sentences of six months.

It is foolish to risk such a fate when a few minutes spent at the Federal Building or a post office will avoid it.

On The Side

BEING a blonde or a brunette is old-fashioned. It's now smart to be red haired. All women wishing to be in style should change to that color. So says a dispatch from Hollywood called to our attention by one who says she is "a natural redhead." She also says: "I am afraid these imitators, these blondes and these cool, calculating brunettes whose personalities will remain the same despite their fake red hair will give us natural redheads a bad name. Our justly deserved reputation for loyalty and capacity for affection will suffer thereby. I think the natural redheads of America should organize to expose their imitators."

"OF THE PROFESSIONS it may be said," observed C. C. Colton, "the soldiers are becoming too popular, parsons too lazy, physicians too mercenary and lawyers too powerful" . . . "Chess," writes George Bernard Shaw, "is a foolish expedient for making idle people believe they are doing something very clever, when they are only wasting their time." And Farquhar rightly exclaimed: "How a little understanding and conversation improve a woman!"

FORTY-FIVE MILLION Americans are not eating correctly. That's why they are not so healthy as they might be. Therefore, diet clinics are to be established to tell people how to eat. A great idea. I remember when I paid no attention to diet and consumed such combinations as fried pork chops, spaghetti, mashed potatoes and chocolate cake. I didn't feel well at that time and if I worked 12 hours a day or played 54 holes of golf on Sunday it made me tired.

IN CALIFORNIA, a woman weighing 117 pounds dragged a 222-pound fish out of the ocean. More proof the female is the "stronger sex." Maybe we should make them carry the suitcases . . . A stupid parting remark is, "Call me up some time." This is an assumption of superiority. Better would be, "May I call you up sometime." And still better: "We should call each other up once in a while" . . . A feminine singer in Manhattan hit a band leader with a plate. She was arrested charged with "simple assault." However, the simplicity of the assault seems to have been due only to circumstances as it is reported when asked why she hit the band leader with a plate the singer snapped: "Because I couldn't lift the piano."

-:- MY DAY

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 28—I had tea Thursday in Washington for a group of the Henry George Foundation and then went over to the Chinese embassy, where Pearl Buck presented the Book of Hope to the Ambassador. This Book of Hope means medical supplies for China, and the Ambassador was appreciative of what American women had done.

Madame Chiang Kai-Shek sent a message giving the thanks of the Chinese women and expressed it in the way which we have grown to appreciate in this country.

I think that the wife of this Chinese leader has made a deep impression on the women of this country. Her courage, personality and determination to help the unfortunate people of her land establish themselves on a better economic basis has won great admiration among women over here.

In addition, she was educated in this country which, of course, gives us a sense of pride in her achievements.

THURSDAY evening I attended a dinner given by the Women's National Democratic Club. I made a short speech and stood in line to shake hands with the guests.

It was a very successful party and I was very glad to see Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Claude Pepper and many other Democratic men and women gathered together so early in the autumn.

It was my first day of social functions after a long summer's rest, and I was rather glad to have the handshaking divided so that neither afternoon nor evening party was a strain.

The President, as usual, was extremely busy and was still hard at work on his basket of mail at midnight. Her Royal Highness, the Crown Princess Martha, with her lady-in-waiting and her chamberlain, were very much elated when we met at teatime, because they had found a very comfortable house in which to live and which will require very little done to it before they move in.

I received Thursday one of the most interesting statements I have read in a long time. It is a joint statement made by a group belonging to the National Conference of Christians and Jews on the question of religion and democracy. I like the first two sentences:

"Religion and democracy are inextricably interwoven. Democracy's survival and growth are not possible without religion."

Another definition is very clarifying:

"We define religion as to know, to love, and to serve God."

These men are doing a splendid work in bringing together people of different religions to prove that common meeting grounds for thought and action can be found.

In 1929, when they were in Europe, Ruth and Rex made an unusual appointment—to meet at the Trocadero, in Madrid, three years from that very day. Their pact also provided that neither was to mention that appointment during those three years—just to see whether either of them would remember . . . SPENCER TRACY IN DOCTOR ROLE

By Louella O. Parsons

Spencer Tracy

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 28—When I saw Spencer Tracy in New York he was getting in as many shows as possible and not thinking about Hollywood. When he returns he'll be handed the script of "Dr. Ephraim McDowell," which is to be his very next picture. Dr. McDowell, in case you don't know (and I didn't until I looked him up) was a pioneer general physician who practiced surgery and was nearly lynched for his advanced ideas. He was a rugged, hearty character and just the sort of character that Spencer plays so well.

Gene Fowler is already preparing the scenario and Gottfried Reinhardt will produce it with Mervyn LeRoy probably directing. What about Fertilla Flats?" Well, M-G-M swears that it isn't true that Paul Muni will do the John Steinbeck novel but I still have a sort of sneaking feeling that Spencer won't do it. "Dr. Ephraim McDowell" seems a so much more suitable vehicle for him and is similar to his successful movie biography, "Edison the Man."

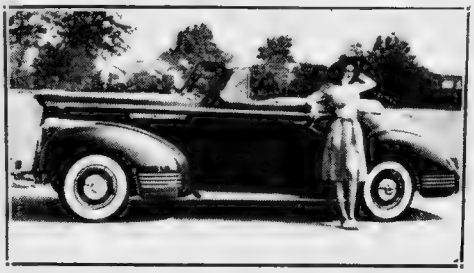
Packard's 1941 Line Makes Debut



SLEEK streamlined 1941 Packard models are being exhibited by the distributor and dealers. Pictured above is the One-Ten DeLuxe convertible with automatic top.

PACKARD'S TWO-TONE COLORS NEW FEATURE

Stressing beauty and style, the Packard Motor Car Co. this year presents five complete "lines" of cars as a strong bid for discriminating public favor.

The 1941 Packards are now on exhibit at the distributor, former Governor Alvin T. Fuller's Packard Motor Co., of Boston, and at Packard dealers throughout the New England territory.

From the newly designated One-Ten Special and One-Ten DeLuxe, through the popular One-Twenty and the luxurious One-Sixty and One-Eighty, Packard has re-styled to hold the popular demand for sleek streamlines and rich, harmonious color combinations.

Matching the vogue for multi-hued sports wear, Kodachrome photographs and Technicolor movies, Packard offers to a color-conscious public a tasteful blending of two-tone body colors with gay interiors in contrasting hues of soft colored leather and rich toned cloth.

Color styled, within and without, the Packard line offers an unprecedented choice of two-tone body and upholstery combinations at small cost.

A typical degree of the color-styling is found in One-Ten DeLuxe. An interior of harmonizing two-tone upholstery gains added richness through the generous use of chrome trim on the instrument panels and window reveals.

Two-tone color, carried to the last degree, is also found in the matching plastic instrument panel, steering wheel and other interior accessories.

Cadillac Plans New Venture

Invasion of the medium priced automotive field in 1941 with the "lowest-priced Cadillac V-8 in history" will be discussed at the meeting of factory and distributor officials at the Parker House.

D. E. Ahrens, general sales manager of Cadillac, will outline to the Boston distributor and New England dealers plans for the 1941 model year.

In addition to Mr. Ahrens, Charles H. Bolts, advertising manager; R. L. Rickenbaugh, sales promotion manager, and E. F. Koff, engineering representatives, will explain phases of the 1941 program.

NEW '41 FORDS IN HIGH

The larger and finer Ford cars for 1941 are now being exhibited by New England dealers. Numerous changes have been made, including a two-inch increase of wheelbase and a corresponding expansion in roominess. Front seats in sedans are seven inches wider.

Bigger tires, luxury type seat cushions and softer springs are used to assure riding comfort, which is further enhanced by added foot room.

The width of the new bodies has made it possible to cover running boards with the skirts of the door-bottoms, thus adding to the trim exterior appearance.

GEAR RATIOS LOWER

Fords 1941 models are offered in two lines, the DeLuxe and Super DeLuxe, each powered with the 85 horsepower V-8 motor. Ford is the only 8-cylinder car in the low priced field.

Gear ratios are lower in the new cars, allowing speedier "get-away." An electrically welded x-type frame is said to be 100 per cent rigid, making the car body mounted on rubber cushions still more quiet on the road. Longer front and rear springs have a balanced action to eliminate pitching.

Hydraulic brakes are of 12 inch diameter. The emergency brake operates on the rear wheels, with the brake lever under the left side of the istrument panel.

NEW BODY TYPE

The Super DeLuxe line includes a new body type, the sedan coupe in which close coupled design provides ample seating for six. Also in that line is a convertible club coupe for five with an electrically operated top.

There are four day types in the DeLuxe line and six in the Super DeLuxe series, which has six color choices against three in the DeLuxe line.

Oldsmobile '41 Models Exhibited

OLDSMOBILE SHOWS SIX '41 NEW SERIES

Oldsmobile launches its 1941 season with a display at dealer showrooms of six new series—three sixes and three eights—that present the widest variety ever offered in the 43-year history of the company.

There is now both a six and an eight-cylinder Ooldsmobile in each of the three-price fields which the company covered in recent seasons.

Olsmobile's exclusive Hydra-Matic drive, that eliminates clutch, clutch pedal and shifts gears automatically, is again optional, at extra cost, on all models, and, due to enlarged production facilities, promises to be a decisively greater sales factor in 1941.

Increased room and comfort, greater engine power, striking new body designs, and scores of detailed improvements all bear witness to the genius for progress that carried Oldsmobile in 1940 to the highest sales marks the company ever reached.

Examination of Oldsmobile's six lines of cars reveals that in the low-priced field, this year, the Special Series replaces the "60" models of former years. Wheelbase of this series has been extended to 119 inches, and horsepower of the six-cylinder model has been upped to an even 100 from the 95 of last year.

Wholly new, and bound to attract keen interest in this highly competitive market, is the new eight-cylinder Special Series, with 110 horsepower to give it flashing performance.

In the popular-price field, the "70" series of last year has for successor the Dynamic Cruiser Series. The bodies of this line are brand new and are a radical departure from any previous Oldsmobile design. The name Dynamic was chosen to suggest the feeling of fleet motion conveyed by these new cars.

Last year's Custom Eight Cruiser, with the front seat full five feet wide, proved far and away the most popular eight Oldsmobile ever built in its entire history. This year, the Custom Cruisers appear with refinements of detail and finish, and with the option of either an eight or six-cylinder engine.

Auto Pioneers To Be Honored

NEW YORK, Sept. 28—Five outstanding pioneers of the horseless carriage days, Charles S. Henshaw, Boston, Ransom E. Olds, Lansing, Mich.; Walter C. Baker, Cleveland; Julian Chase, Philadelphia; and Charles B. King, Larchmont, will be cited for awards because of significant contributions to the development of the motor car by the Automobile Old Timers.

The citations will be presented at the second annual luncheon of the organization to be held at the Hotel Roosevelt on October 16.

Hub Dealers Plan Auto Show for Week of Oct. 19

"Open House" Week, Boston's streamlined and individualized Automobile Show, will be held from October 19 through October 26.

On this occasion each automobile dealer, not only in the city proper but throughout the metropolitan area, in his own showrooms, presents an attractive display of his new models to the public.

The date set is one that practically coincides with that of the New York National Automobile Show, which is scheduled for the week of October 12th to 20th.

A. L. Danforth, president of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, has announced a committee comprising himself, Allen M. Fay, Harry B. Liggett, R. C. Gilmer, F. A. Hinchcliffe, Dwight T. Hersey and C. S. Henshaw, who will direct the promotion campaign.

The show will be widely advertised. Owing to increased facilities and the flexibility of displays, they will be much larger than any held previously, with approximately 350 models of different makes on exhibition.

Judging by advance interest, the public response will be great, all resulting in increased sales, which means more work for the factories and steady work for thousands of employes.

The Woman Who Lived in Hitler's House

The Story So Far:

Pauline Kohler, beautiful German girl, became a maid in Hitler's mountain chalet through the efforts of influential friends who had previously obtained her release from Dachau Concentration Camp, where she was imprisoned for talking unguardedly about the Nazi regime.

Life in that isolated fortress, known to the world as Berchtesgaden, proved to be a mixture of piratical luxury, rigid discipline, medieval astrology, ultra-modern precautions against assassination, barbaric cruelty and never-ending suspense.

PAULINE KOHLER

Among Pauline Kohler's revelations are the identities of the three Hitler doubles; the nature of the Fuehrer's illness; the particular roles leading Nazi officials, including Goering, Goebbels, Streicher and Hess, play in the government of modern Germany, and the elaborate plans made to continue the dictatorship in the event of the Chancellor's death.

She has described the women who enjoyed Hitler's favor at various times, and named those who might have become his wife.

Today she pens an observer's account of the exciting events that preceded the seizure of Austria.

BERCHTESGADEN IN THE HEART OF NAZI GERMANY
Where Hitler Resides, Entertains His Friends and Maps His Future

By PAULINE KOHLER

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This story is published, without opportunity for confirmation, for what the author purports it to be.)

I HAVE TOLD something of the atmosphere at Berchtesgaden when Schuschnigg was brow-beaten into surrendering his country to the Nazi wolves. But the most dramatic and exciting moments of my life were those at the Berghof on the eve of the actual invasion of Austria. Himmler, Goering, Goebbels, Von Richenau and dozens of other military and air force bigwigs were there. Everyone was seized with excitement. Even over the domestic quarters the same tension prevailed.

We were warned by Schieben to be extremely careful in our behavior and see that not the tiniest detail went wrong when he were serving food or doing our other work.

Hitler had not been to bed for two days. He ate little, too. All the usual schedule was thrown out of gear.

He lived on literally nothing but cups of coffee, and he was dictating and interviewing officials without a break.

Those of us who went into his study also noticed that he was working himself up into one of his best states of frenzy. It sounded bad for somebody.

First to catch it was Gen. Von Sperrle, the air force chief. I do not know what went wrong, but he was being half thrown out of the study by a Fuehrer screaming with passion as I happened to be passing.

IN ANGRY MOOD
"Hitler had rows, violent rows, with every important member of his entourage . . ."

FUEHRER RAGES

Then everybody began to get into trouble. Even Goering was not immune. Hitler had rows, violent rows, with every important member of his entourage that day.

It seemed that there was general opposition to his plans for the invasion.

In fact, the "rebels" were very angry with him. They held a sort of indignation meeting in the library, and at one time we all thought there was going to be a real revolt.

However, the Fuehrer had his own way, as usual, and, by the afternoon, things seemed to have quieted down, though, of course, there was tremendous activity.

Hitler locked himself in his study at 3 o'clock, and refused to see anyone, although all kinds of urgent business was waiting and all kinds of very important officers were waiting with it.

At 4 o'clock he rang to the kitchen for coffee. I was told to take it. And I approached the room a little nervously. I knocked and nearly dropped the tray when Hitler's harsh voice howled, "get away from here!" Then "who the devil is it?"

I replied, "coffee, mein Fuehrer," in a feeble voice, and there was a grunt. He came and opened the door. As I put the tray on his desk he was talking to himself. "Fools. Sperrle will have to go. I am sick of his superior stupidity. Am I never to get any peace in this house to do my work?"

His voice dropped to a mumbling. I could not distinguish what he was saying. I was glad to get out quickly, for on the Fuehrer's pallid face was a look which told of an imminent fit of hysteria. His eyes were blazing. His face was twitching.

I am sure that he did not even notice I was in the room.

I was off duty at 6 o'clock on that February evening, and I went down to the recreation room to see who was there.

I found Greta there playing some card game by herself, and we fell to talking about the day's events.

She told me that she had seen Goering threaten to use his dog-whip on Himmler, with whom he had been having a tremendous argument.

HITLER VANISHES!

I said I wished he had done it, and as we were laughing the door burst open, and Franz the valet shot in quivering with excitement. "The-the-the Fuehrer's missing!" he stuttered. He was almost in a state of collapse with excitement.

Gradually we managed to get a coherent story out of him.

It seemed that von Reichenau, having some matter of the greatest importance to discuss, had marched to the Fuehrer's study and had determined to get in.

He knocked but could get no answer. Then he tried the door handle and found that the door was not locked, to his surprise.

As he swung it open he saw the Fuehrer's desk empty.

Not that this excited any wonder. The general simply went away and asked several of the secretaries where the Fuehrer was. No one seemed to know.

Gradually everyone who might be expected to know where Hitler was had been asked without result. Then the servants were called. No one had seen him. Every room was visited.

Officials went into the garden. Guards were questioned. Still no answer. The Gestapo took charge.

As Franz was talking a Gestapo man came into the room and began to question Greta and me.

By eight o'clock a real tooth-comb search had begun. It produced nothing. Panic set in. Even Himmler lost his head a little.

He began to threaten his men and to blame them for the Fuehrer's disappearance.

A cordon was put round Berchtesgaden with a circumference of more than four miles. It began to close systematically. A standstill order was given for all traffic in the vicinity.

Every stranger for miles was arrested and brought to Himmler.

Some of these unfortunates went through a vicious third degree. All were locked up when the questioning was finished.

Everyone believed that Hitler had been assassinated. I have never seen the Gestapo machine put out of gear so badly.

Then it was suddenly discovered that one of the Storm Troopers was missing. Pangemonium. He was a spy. He had killed the Fuehrer and escaped. He was a foreign agent. He was an Austrian.

There was no end of stories that flashed from lip to lip.

A FALSE ALARM

At half-past 10 when we servants were in the kitchen, there was a tremendous commotion and we heard cheers. We rushed out.

The Fuehrer was entering the house surrounded by excited officials!

Himmler came dashing up from his office. The Fuehrer marched to his study and soon all his lieutenants were closeted with him. It was an hour before we heard what had happened.

Hitler had decided to go for one of his solitary walks to think things out. He had left the grounds by a barely-used path to the woods, and had apparently got well into the mountains before the search began, and was beyond the cordon when it was put into operation.

But the drama was not over. It was to end in tragedy. And the victim was the missing Storm Trooper.

Rudolf Schroder was 19 and in love with the daughter of a local farmer. He was on guard duty in the grounds on this night, and his post was a box from which he could have seen the Fuehrer pass on his way to the mountains had he been there. He was in the woods with his love, unluckily for him.

And the loving couple had found a spot so secluded that they had even escaped detection in the hunt for the Fuehrer.

Unaware of the tremendous events which had taken place, Rudolf blithely returned to the Gestapo quarters at midnight when his duty had ended.

He was sent to Hitler's study, where the panjandrums were still in session.

And before the assembly of the greatest men in Germany, in the presence of the Fuehrer himself, Rudolf Schroder took his own life.

We never got the exact details. But we gathered that the youth, overcome by terror or remorse, had slashed open his throat with a safety razor blade he had managed to secrete on himself.

We got our information of the facts from a guard who was in the room, though for some reason he was very secretive about the whole affair.

We were not in bed until 2 a. m. on that fateful day. Few of us could sleep.

Next day peace descended. The generals departed. The storm center had shifted. At noon the seizure of Austria had begun.

We did not see Hitler that day. He went away in his big Mercedes very early.

Some say that, in disguise as a common soldier, he had insisted in being the first German to cross the Austrian frontier at the head of the troops.

I can well believe that story, for Austria was the Fuehrer's greatest obsession.

A NEW BOOK

He used to spend hours at his telescope looking across the frontier. Of all his acts of violence to powerless neighbors, I believe that the act against Austria was prompted by real idealism and not by sheer gangster acquisitiveness and lust of power.

I became friendly at this time with Frederick Emzig, one of the Fuehrer's secretaries, and one day he gave me a piece of information which I do not believe has ever been hinted at in the world before.

Hitler and Hess have written a sequel to their famous book, "My Struggle." It will never be published until the Fuehrer has achieved the world domination of a substantial part of it, which is his dream. As yet the work has no title, but it will be given one on the lines of "How I Did It."

If it were published now the repercussions might be fatal to the regime, for it is far more frank than the most notorious parts of "My Struggle."

Moreover, it deals with many famous personalities. Chamberlain is referred to as "the man who gave me the British Empire because I shouted at him."

Hitler's contempt for the Italians and his plans to make them a slave-nation of workers for the Germans are fully described.

Moreover, the book admits openly the tricks and ruses, the bluffings and the impossibility of carrying out threats that the Fuehrer used to get what he wanted from distinguished statesmen.

There are also full details of how agents secured dossiers of anti-Nazi elements whose names are in Himmler's files. Many of these are world famous.

The book is still largely incomplete. Certain sections are blank, waiting to be filled with actual details, but the whole work is based on the assumption that Britain, France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, the Netherlands and Scandinavia are in Nazi hands or at least controlled by puppet governments taking orders from Berlin.

The British Empire and the French Empire, are, of course, fully under the control of Germany.

Names which would astonish the world, I was told, are mentioned as gauleiters in the conquered territories. Emzig would not tell me these, but he said that certain famous men in the democracies, secretly in Hitler's pocket, would be arrested today if their governments would take a glimpse at the new book.

Some horrid changes must have been made in the work, however, since the outbreak of the war, because the Soviet problem has not worked out according to plan.

Emzig told me that Russia would be the first Great power on whom Germany would declare war in order to seize raw materials from the Ukraine in readiness for the attack on the democracies.

The book apparently describes how Hitler's "Fifth Column" in Paris and London insured that no interference would be forthcoming while the Russians were dealing with

SUPREME FAITH

But the very fact that the book describes events that have not yet occurred is proof of Hitler's faith in his infallibility and in his certainty of the exact fulfillment of [illegible].

This book also sets down for the first time many details of Hitler's personal life which have never before been revealed. His relations with women, for example, are described in detail. So are many aspects of private lives of [illegible].

One section that would deceive [illegible] Nazis [illegible] at later stages of the plan. These men are exempt [illegible] the highest posts [illegible] Partei [illegible].

Not even the Gestapo heads know the contents of "How I Did It." They would give their right arms for [illegible].

But only Himmler, Hess and Emzig know that it has been written.

The manuscript is kept in a steel box which is locked in Hitler's private bomb proof, fire-proof safe.

This is made of an alloy which defies even oxy-acetylene cutting plant and it has a combination known only to Hess and Hitler.

How did the author escape from Hitler's house? Don't miss Monday's thrilling chapter.

TIGERS WRITE HISTORY BY WINNING FLAG

CLEVELAND, Sept. 28 (AP)—One of the most amazing triumphs in baseball history was an accomplished fact today.

The Detroit Tigers, whom nobody gave a hope of getting anywhere last spring, had clinched the American League flag and were only playing out their string here before meeting the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series starting next Wednsday.

Perfectly in keeping with their bizarre record for the season, the Tigers won their deciding victory yesterday behind a florid young rookie named Floyd Giebell, who shut out the local Indians, 2 to 0, and who won't even be eligible to pitch against Cincinnati.

Rudy York, who has played first base regularly for the Tigers this year only because Hank Greenberg, the team's $40,000-per-annum star, consented to be shifted to the outfield, supplied the conclusive runs off Bobby Feller with a towering home run into the left field stands.

Feller gave up only three hits, and one of those was a fluke double by Greenberg which Roy Weatherly of Cleveland lost in the sun. But the great Bobby was licked, nevertheless, by an unknown rookie, who probably was the most surprised individual in Ohio when Manager Del Baker told him to get out there and pitch.

TEAM OF DESTINY

The strange wind-up to the most heated American League race in recent years came as no surprise either to the Detroit players or to their owner, the wealthy Walter O. Briggs. This aggregation of veterans apparently realized it was star-struck some months ago, and felt that nothing could deprive it of a pennant.

In Owner Briggs suite last night when his players, one by one, came up to see him and to offer their congratulations they saw a sick man for the last eight months, and he was in a wheel chair yesterday at the game. His son, "Spike" Briggs, said this was what his father had been living for, mostly.

One by one the players, led by Greenberg, came in and sat down solemnly and told him they were happy to have won for him. Aside, later, each of them admitted that at the season's start they had no idea of winning the pennant.

MANY QUESTION MARKS

Greenberg didn't know whether he could play the outfield, Dick Bartell, the veteran shortstop, didn't know whether his health would hold out for the season. Nobody would have bet a nickel that Schoolboy Rowe would win five games—much less 16. But they went on, week after week, holding together and developing a great fighting spirit, and they say it was the latter that made their victory possible.

"There's never been a club with a finer fighting spirit," said Manager Del Baker, who, incidentally, might be classified as baseball's unknown man. "They did everything I asked of them. What Giebell did to the Indians was no more than the others have done all the way."

It was a tremendous gamble on Baker's part—starting the boy who had pitched only one game for the Tigers since reporting from Buffalo. The game was vital, and it was logical to expect that Feller would be at his brilliant best. But the Tigers' luck held to the last, and Giebell turned in a veritable masterpiece.

CHAPMAN FANNED 3 TIMES

He had Ben Chapman mesmerized, in particular, whiffing the veteran slugger three times running with teasing pitches, each time with two runners on base.

The Cleveland players took their elimination quietly. There was no sign of the blow-off that had been half expected between Manager Oscar Vitt and the players who rebelled on him in mid-season. It might possible come yet, but probably not. The realization of what their internal squabble cost appears to have stunned them.

"I don't know whether I'll stay for the world series" said Vitt. "I might go on home. It's been a hard year."

Wife Hunting For Hornsby

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28 (INS)—The whereabouts of Rogers Hornsby, former major league baseball star and recently manager of the Oklahoma City Club, today was a mystery to his wife.

Mrs. Hornsby, who advertised in a newspaper for information concerning him, said she had not heard from her husband for several days, and was holding import at mail for him. The Oklahoma City Club closed its season ten days ago.

To no one's surprise, the American League batting championship will be retained by Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees, but Johnny Mize of the Cards is about to give up his 1939 title to Debs Garms of the Pittsburgh Pirates, according to Associated Press figures.

Garms was overlooked for a long time because it was obvious he wouldn't get to bat 400 times, and it was assumed that that was one of the requirements. However, President Ford Frick has said there is no such stipulation, so Garms' .363 in 350 times at bat is likely to stand for the title.

The American League race is even closer. DiMaggio has .348, just two points better than Rip Radcliff of the Browns, Luke Appling of Chicago, with .345, is too close for comfort and Hank Greenberg of Detroit and Ted Williams of Boston are not far away—with marks of .340 and .338 respectively.

Detroit Prepares for Series

DETROIT, Sept. 28 (AP)—Relaxed at last with a championship to dote over, faithful followers of the victorious Detroit Tigers did justice to the bacon and eggs this morning and gobbled up, as well, every printed word about their heroes.

Once again ready to take a winner to its bosom, the city started plans to pay official homage to the new American League champions and entered enthusiastically into preparations for the World Series.

A big corps of clerks in the ball club's offices at Briggs Stadium labored overtime to handle huge stacks of requests for reservations, while the city fathers got to work on the job of playing hosts to thousands of visitors next week.

But, on the whole, Detroit seemed to take this championship in stride.

Small boys shouted on the streets yesterday when rookie pitcher Floyd Giebell and his mates vanquished the Indians at Cleveland. Many a foaming flagon slid into the grasp of a celebrating Tiger rooter in bars last night.

Some confetti fluttered out of windows in downtown office buildings. Yet Detroit was quite calm.

There was no concerted demonstration, no place where police had to step in to quiet overly aroused citizens.

Hotel men and cafe men, visioning a big World Series trade, swung into preparations similar to those of 1934 and 1935 when Detroit went "all out" for the series with the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicag

Sell-outs of the ball park for all games in Detroit were indicated. The Stadium reported that requests for reservations already exceeded the supply. The park accommodates approximately 58,000—including about 30,000 reserved seats.

It was not known here whether the Tigers would return home directly from Cleveland, where they finish the Indian series Sunday or go on to Cincinnati to wait for the World Series opener Wednesday. Thus plans for a homecoming celebration for the Tigers were held up.

However, Mayor Edward Jeffries announced last night that an official civic celebration will be held after the series—win or lose.

Steve O'Neill Will Pilot Indians in '41?

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP)—Steve O'Neill, manager of the International League Buffalo baseball club for the past three years, plans to resign in favor of a major league berth, according to the Buffalo Courier-Express.

O'Neill, now in Cleveland, the Courier-Express said, will return to Buffalo and formally resign after the World Series. The former pilot of the Cleveland Indians, according to the story, "was completely reticent about his future berth beyond stating that it would be with a big league organization."

The Real Story Behind the CLEVELAND "CRY BABIES"

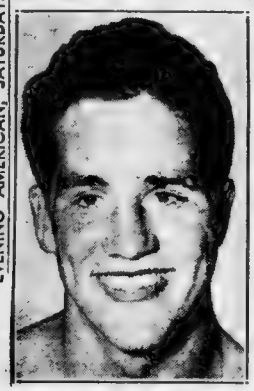
BY DAVE EGAN

Starts in Monday's Daily Record

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

BILLY CONN, world's light heavyweight champion, against Al McCoy at the Boston Garden on October 18 will mark the return of big time boxing to this city. It is the most important bout arranged by Matchmaker "Rip" Valenti of the Goodwin A. C. since Hammering Henry Armstrong defended his world's welterweight crown against Paul Junior and Ralph Zanelli.



BILLY CONN

Conn established himself as a leading contender for a title bout with Joe Louis when he scored a sensational 13-round knockout over Bob Pastor. In the Pastor bout, Conn displayed his usual amazing speed and boxing class, and in addition proved he can punch. It was savage left hooks delivered first to the jaw and then to the body that knocked Pastor out.

McCoy is the New England heavyweight champion, and he is well fitted by experience and ability to give Conn a furious battle. McCoy is only 26 years of age, and at his physical peak.

McCoy has been active in New York and Philadelphia rings during the summer. For two weeks Al has been training quietly in the expectation that the Conn bout would be closed. It was first planned to hold the bout at the time of the American Legion Convention. This plan was abandoned when Conn signed for a September bout with Pastor in New York. Billy then increased his standing as a heavyweight contender by knocking out Pastor.

Conn Eager to Battle Louis Next Year

THE CONN PROGRAM calls for him to meet the best available heavyweights during the indoor season. If he is successful in winning all of his bouts, the Pittsburgh favorite will be signed to meet Joe Louis in what may develop into a million dollar show next June.

Max Baer, who knocked out Pat Comiskey in a round in New Jersey, is listed among the probable opponents for Conn.

"I believe Conn can beat any heavyweight in the world," Johnny Ray, Billy's manager, told me in a conversation over the long distance telephone from New York. "This is why I consented to sign for McCoy. I know Al is one of the smartest boxers of his weight in the country, and also that he is a good puncher. If Conn is to meet Louis next year, he must prove he can beat McCoy, Baer and similar type of opponents.

"Conn will be in Boston a week before the match to train. Billy will do his preliminary training in New York, but he will finish his conditioning in Boston. Conn is the only Irish-American ring champion, and he certainly will get a warm reception in Boston if what George Freeman tells me about the town is true."

Conn has done much to bring back boxing in a big way in New York. The Pittsburgh youngster has been a sensation in his New York ring engagements. He will jam the local Garden with McCoy, and if he wins he can come right back here for another big macth. McCoy, however, is quite confident he will stop the Conn surge for the fistic heights.

Armstrong to Return to Boston Ring

HENRY ARMSTRONG will also return to the local Garden for indoor bouts. Eddie Mead was pleased with the treatment Armstrong received when he came here for his contests with Paul Junior and Ralph Zanelli.

There is talk of a meeting between Armstrong and Mike Kaplan of Dorchester. Kaplan has been boxing with success in New York and Philadelphia rings. New York boxing writers refer to Kaplan as "another Benny Leonard" in the matter of ring skill.

Zanelli is also aiming for another crack at Armstrong. Hammering Henry has repeatedly stated that Zanelli hit him harder than any other welterweight challenger. Zanelli has gone under the management of Johnny Buckley. The latter has also taken over the management of George Salamone of East Boston.

While in New York signing Conn to meet McCoy, Matchmaker Valenti talked with Mike Jacobs about the possibility of bringing Joe Louis here for a title bout. Lous was once offered a guarantee of $50,000 to meet McCoy in Boston, but he refused the bid on account of other matches. Now that the "Brown Bomber" has not many available opponents, he might consent to show in this city.

While professional boxing is once more picking up in the matter of public interest, the Irish-American A.C. is going ahead with plans for its amateur boxing season which will open at the Arena on next Monday night. This is the first of the Golden Glove trials and it will bring together some first class ring stars.

Landry Seeks More Ring Titles

The postponed inaugural of the indoor amateur boxing season will be staged at the Arena next Monday night when the Irish-American A. A. stages the first tryout tournament of the Golden Gloves championships.

There will be bouts in all eight championship classes, from flyweight to heavyweight, and New England's leading amateur boxers will be seen in action.

Fans who like the little flyweights are in for a treat Monday because Joe Landry of Gardner, the 1940 N. E. junior king, will start out on his quest for greater honors when he swaps blows with Albert Vendriglio, Lawrence; Bill Kaiskas, New Bedford, and Orlando Fanti of Lynn.

Competition in the 135-pound class should also be appealing, with sensational Bob McCabe of Sharon making his first appearance at an Irish-American show.

The Salvation Army camp cook will meet plenty of stiff opposition when he faces William Davis, Lawrence; Daniel Webster, Winthrop; Dom DiTomasso, East Boston; Jimmy Kelley, Lowell; Irving Luce, Boston, and Sam DiVincenzo, Haverhill.

McCabe is a very aggressive, hard-hitting youngster, and is bound to make a big hit with Boston fight fandom.

RIFLE ASSOCIATION TO AID HEARST SHOOT

The William Randolph Hearst Citizen Marksmanship competition that is open to every American has won the hearty endorsement of the National Rifle Association. This organization, that has clubs in all sections of the United States, has agreed to give the Hearst tournament its full support.

There are many rifle clubs in Massachusetts affiliated with the National Rifle Association. It is expected that they will compete in the Hearst competition.

There will be two groups for competition. One will be for the organized clubs and those that may be organized this fall. The other will be for school teams and for new junior clubs.

WILL HOLD HEARST TROPHY

To the team winning the Hearst championship will be awarded the William Randolph Hearst Citizen trophy to be held for one year. A replica of this trophy is to be held in perpetuity. There will also be five gold lapel buttons for members of the winning team.

For the second team there will be five silver lapel buttons. There will be bronze buttons for the third, fourth and fifth teams.

There is no entry fee. Merely organize your rifle teams and enter.

RECORD ENTRY EXPECTED

There is widespread interest in markmanship, and it is expected that the Hearst competition will attract a record list of entries. New England has always been famous for its crack shots, and they will now have an opportunity to display their ability in an important competition.

League entries may be filed after the league season has begun but they must be in the office of the Rifle Editor not later than December 15.

DECEMBER 1 DEADLINE

Club and team entries made without affiliation must be in the office of the rifle editor not later than December 1.

An entry blank will be published in next Monday's American-Record. Additional entry blanks may be secured by writing to the Rifle Editor, American-Record, Winthrop sq., Boston.

Bears Play 5 Games at Fenway

The Bears, Boston's entry in the American Professional Football League, will play five league games at Fenway Park during October, opening against the 1939 league champions, the Columbus Bullies, next Wednesday night.

Following the Bullies to Boston will be the Cincinnati Bengals on October 4; the New York Yankees on October 13; the Buffalo Indians on October 20; and the Milwaukee Chiefs on October 27. The remainder of the Bear's schedule, played away from home is as follows: October 16 at Buffalo, November 3 at Milwaukee, November 10 at Cincinnati, and November 17 at Columbus. The Bears have also scheduled an exhibition game with the Kenosha Cardinals at Kenosha, Wisconsin, on November 6 and will play the Yankees in New York on a date to be agreed upon later.

Under the direction of Head Coach Eddie Casey, the Bears have been drilling twice daily at headquarters in Jefferson, Mass. The former Harvard backfield star plans a wide-open offense for the local club.

TERRIERS FACE 'EM

NORWICH'S DOMINA WILL TEST TERRIERS

This afternoon a new chapter will be written in Boston University grid history.

Not only have the Terriers the town to themselves for their opener against Norwich but it will mark the return of the Scarlet and White to Nickerson Field in Weston after a lapse of two years.

Forced out of their home field in 1938 because of the devastating effects of the hurricane, the Hanleymen have been using Fenway Park and the National League Field for their home site.

Now, however thanks to the donation of bleachers from Fenway Park, the purchasing of portable steel stands, the new setup provides a seating capacity for over 6000 fans and more than doubles the previous arrangement.

DOMINA KEY TO NORWICH

And chances are that the stands will be filled to capacity today, for this only local college football attraction.

Norwich is not only on the way to grid fame, but in Walter "Dynamo" Domina the Cadets have one of the best small college backs in the land.

Coach Don McCallister has built his entire attack around this 191-pound triple-threat, and as Dynamo goes, so will Norwich go.

Coach Pat Hanley will try to match Domina with a diversified attack. Walt Williams and Ralph Salvati will cope with Domina in passing and kicking while Jimmy Cassidy, Gus Sullivan, Charlie Thomas, Frankie Provinzano and Al Clark will try to outdo Domina in yardage gained via the ball carrying method.

IRONMAN TEAM

Norwich, because of the fact that it will not use freshmen, will be forced to use many of their standouts for 60 minute football.

But the Horsemen will not be alone in that respect.

Lack of veteran reserve strength in the line from tackle to tackle plus the injury bugaboo will necessitate Coach Pat Hanley keeping many members of his forward wall in there from opening whistle to the final toot in the event the going is real tough all the way.

Chances are that there will be plenty of offense shown in this fray and critics feel that the afternoon may wind up in a great offensive battle.

Their reasoning is based on the fact that both clubs will be handicapped defensively by the loss of stars through injuries.

TWO TERRIERS ON SIDELINES

McCloskey, a huge six-foot, five-inch center who weighs 220, and the Hughes brothers, two great defensive backs, are all on the shelf and will see little if any action for the Cadets this afternoon.

To match these injuries Coach Pat Hanley has Joe Lanata, his first string left end, on the sidelines with a broken leg, and Ed Rooney, his big 215-pound regular tackle, out with a dislocated knee.

Norwich is out to make its first real bid for football fame.

Tufts Open At Bowdoin

BRUNSWICK, Me., Sept. 28 (AP)—Bowdoin's football forces, experimenting with a no-huddle attack designed to use the backs' speed to full advantage, opens its season today against Tufts, an opponent heretofore reserved since 1889 for the Polar Bears' final game.

Bowdoin, last year's Maine co-champions with Colby, enters the fray with a wealth of reserves.

By JOHN GILLOOLY

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 28—Well, the songs have been sung, this historic city has been scoured and shaken and over a thousand boisterous Boston College rooters are tucked in among 40,000 in the Sugar Bowl, anxiously awaiting the shrill blast of a referee's whistle which will send their Eagles into action against the terrifying Tulanes, mighty power of the South, in a game of football that both clubs contemplate using as a stepping stone to the mythical national title.

A Tulane team that is big, tough and experienced is conceded the verdict by a majority of the football wiseacres to edge this talented troop from Chestnut Hill but it is important to note that among this majority is not a solitary Eagle grumman, not a solitary B. C. old boy.

The confident mannerisms of Coach Frank Leahy's legion has made a deep impression in New Orleans and a chesty, confident city of two days ago has been hauling out the ifs and buts these last few hours before game-time (4 p. m. back in Boston) and iffing and butting all over the French quarter and the American section and Magnolia st. and the Vieux Carre De La Ville which stands for nothing more than Old Square.

O'ROURKE IMPRESSIVE

One youngster in particular has caught the fancy of the Tulane followers.

He's Lean and Lanky and Limber Charlie O'Rourke, and he caught their fancy with his nonchalant, angel-splitting throws in Eagle workouts. Charlie looks as though he'd have trouble even lifting a football but he's shown them some stream-lined heaves and the sports pages today were dedicated to the task of warning the Green Wave to beware of, and have a caution for, the Malden Menace.

Later today, should Charlie pass as he did against Auburn; run as he did against Kansas State and kick as he did against Holy Cross in '39, he may set off the spark and cause the Eagles to explode in the teeth of what is being called the greatest team the South has ever produced.

O'ROURKE CAN DO IT

A titanic task, but Chuckling Charlie is just the boy who is ready, willing and able to do it. If Tulane stops O'Rourke they undoubtedly deserve all the adjectives being heaped upon them by the Southern sports writers.

Speaking of adjectives, the B. C. club has been hit with some corkers since their arrival in this charming metropolis. Here are a few of the headlines and sentiments in the local dailies:

"Boston Behemoths Breeze Into Crescent City."

"Ogre From Boston Descends On New Orleans."

"Elegant Eagles Swoop Into Town."

"Speed, Size of B. C. Startles Natives."

"Boston College Team Has Everything."

These give you a rough idea of the impression our brawny Bostonians have made on their Southern neighbors.

But the impression that counts is the one that will be made out on that "Little Old Football Field," as it's referred to down this way, and that is just where the Eagles plan to make it.

WIN GAME FOR LEAHY'S BABY

The Eagles have dug a cozy, well-cooked plot and have dusted it off for this special occasion. As in the movies the boys have banded together in solemn covenant and have sworn themselves to the duty of winning today's Donnybrook for, you guessed it, Frank Leahy's new baby, pp.

As a scenario it's strictly stale, but as an inspiration to this Boston College team it could easily turn

TIGER TEAMWORK VICTORY SECRET

By LAWTON CARVER
International News Service Sports Editor

A manager who dared to take chances, players who stood up for him, and all-around team-work and hustle made of a fifth-place Detroit club the 1940 pennant-winner in the American League and contender in the World Series against the Cincinnati Reds beginning next Wednesday.

Del Baker, a catcher by trade and a third base coach by inclination, became a manager by accident and led the surge which reached a climax yesterday quite in keeping with everything that has gone before.

The Tigers started this year with a catcher on first base, a first baseman in left field, with one great pitcher and one who might go lame, and with an infield that fairly groaned and creaked of old age.

That same crew was in there for the pennant-clincher yesterday against the Cleveland Indians—the same crew, that is, except one. He, of course, is and was Floyd Giebell, the 25-year-old Buffalo rookie right-hander, who beat the blazing Bob Feller.

POWER MOVE WINS

Baker, who became manager when a beaning ended Mickey Cochrane's career in 1938, decided this season to utilize all the power available to pull the club out of the fifth place finish of 1939.

The result of this decision was the switch of Hank Greenberg from first base to the outfield and of Rudy York from behind the bat to first base. The result of the result, so to speak, was 41 home runs, 150 runs batted in and an average of .318 for York. What's more, both fielded their positions.

While these two gents were setting out to wreck opposing pitching and distant fences simultaneously, Buck Newsom, an acquisition from the St. Louis Browns, and Schoolboy Rowe, a Tiger hero of other years, proceeded to have great seasons. Much was expected of Newsom and he came through with 21 wins and four defeats.

ANCIENTS COME THROUGH

But Rowe's status was doubtful due to an uncertain arm. When his arm hadn't left its hinges as the Tigers came toward the stretch his case was stamped as a comeback and he made it official by winning 16 and losing only three.

In the midst of all this, second baseman Charlie Gehringer, 37 years old; shortstop Dick Bartell, 33, and third baseman Pinky Higgins, 31, all struggled along in the role of the oldest infield in the circuit, and kept u pthe fight despite ailments, which laid each of them low at one time or another. Only York of the inner works eluded the doctors.

Teamwork under prevailing circumstances might have been impaired or totally shattered but for Baker's hold on his men, his manner of dealing with them, and his willingness to take chances when it seemed advisable.

TEAM OF HUSTLERS

The Tigers responded by making up with hustle whatever they lacked in technical niceties here and there, and they may go on to the world championship.

They have a great young outfielder in Barney McCosky, whose batting average is .331, compared with Outfielder Greenberg's team-leading .340, and better than average pitchers in Tommy Bridges and Harold Newhouser, besides Newsom and Rowe. Birdie Tebbetts and Billy Sullivan will handle the catching.

What they will be depending upon mostly against the Reds is the pitching of Newsom and Rowe and the one-two punch of Greenberg and York—good enough to win a pennant.

Williams Makes Babe's Team

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (INS)—Babe Ruth, former New York Yankee home run slugger, picked his 18th annual all-star baseball team today as part of his festivities as the year's final baseball instructor at the World's Fair, but he entirely overlooked the Cincinnati Reds, National League champions.

Three Detroit Tigers, champions of the American League, were named on the team to head the list numerically.

The Babe's all-stars follow in batting order:

Heroes and Goats

By International News Service

Heroes—Floyd Giebbell, Tigers, a rookie righthander who pitched Detroit into the American League pennant; Arky Vaughan, Pirates, whose double in the 10th inning beat the Reds and clinched fourth place in the National League for the Pirates; Rudy York, Tigers, whose homer accounted for all the runs against Bob Feller.

Goats—Ben Chapman, Indians, who whiffed three times in the clutch and had his hands on York's circuit smash before it fell into the stands; Whitey Moore, Reds, whose wildness put Pittsburgh's winning run on base in the 10th.

2-Year-Olds Bid for $66,500

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (AP)—The confusing 2-year-old racing situation, which this year has seen the leading juveniles run like champions in one outing and like platers the next, should become a lot clearer today with the 51st running of the Futurity Stakes at Belmont Park.

Fourteen galloping youngsters, including all but a scant few of the top-flight contenders for the championship, were entered for the 6½ furlong dash down the Widener straightaway, with about $66,500 going to the winner.

The betting choice probably lies between Warren Wright's Whirlaway, a slow-starting but stretch-running son of Blenheim II; Alfred Vanderbilt's New World, and Ogden Phipps' King Cole. Yet, the chances are this race will follow the year's juvenile pattern and some longshot outsider will step down in front.

With Challedon running at Havre De Grace, hte Futurity's companion feature on Belmont's program, the Jockey Club Gold Cup, lost a lot of its glamour, drew only four horses and made it appear a cinch for Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons' entry of Fenelon and Dusky Fox.

75,000 SEE U.C.L.A. BOW TO METHODIST

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28 (AP)—Pulling the game out of the fire in the last quarter, Southern Methodist University opened its 1940 football campaign with a 9 to 6 victory over the University of California at Los Angeles in a battle that kept the record open-night crowd of 75,000 in an uproar.

Undefeated, but four times tied in 1939, the Uclans got off to a lead in the second quarter with Jack Rabbit Jack Robinson, Negro halfback star, taking a punt on the bounce and streaking up the field 89 yards for a touchdown.

ROBINSON BECOMES GOAT

Robinson's try for the extra point was smothered by the irate mustangs, who lived up to advance notice as a mighty challenger for honors in the South Southwest Conference.

First a hero, Robinson was then the goat. Late in the third quarter, with the help—or lack of help from his mates—he put the Bruins in a hole when he flipped a long pass into a herd of the ponies from Dallas. Ray Mallouf speared it without much trouble, and the Bruins began to s'ew.

Four times within the next few tense minutes Matty Bell's mustangs drove inside the Uclan 20-yard stripe. Twice they got to the five-yard line. Each time the Bruins threw them back, once on a try for a first down on the three that lacked one foot.

CLEMENT CALLS SHOTS

Finally, as the fourth quarter dawned, a newcomer to the mustang array of flashy backs, Johnny Clement, came in and got his mates off to the races—at last. From the 33 Clement uncorked a 20-yard pass to Bob Baccus. Another found Keeton, a substitute end, for six yards, Clement on the next play barnstormed himself through the center of the line to tie the score. The try for the extra point was no good.

With five mintues left to go, Johnston dropped back and booted a field goal to win the game.

Huskies Underdogs To Vermont

BURLINGTON, Vt., Sept. 28—Northeastern University's football team is the under-dog facing the University of Vermont here this afternoon.

Coach Jimmy Dunn plans to use two backfields interchangeably. A pair of sophomores, Joe Dias of New Bedford and Frannie Murray of Winchester, have been added to the starting lineup and will team with Ronnie Tubbs and Phil Sheridan in the first squad.

The second group, which looks even more potent offensively, includes Jim Shea of Brighton at tailback, Ed Sakovitz of Framingham at fullback, Gunnar Myrback of Quincy at blocking back and Ed Barry of Wellesley at wingback. It is expected that these four will carry much of the offensive burden.

Quite a fuss was made over Coach Frank's latest acquisition and he was congratulated at every turn. However, the one group that doesn't give a hoorah for B. C.'s presenting this game to Leahy's infant daughter is the Tulane outfit and it figures to have a lot to say as to the outcome of the contest.

This Green Wave plans to sweep the Eagles right into the gulf and from the precision and power it allegedly possesses it figures to be able to do so. Their club, defeated only in the Sugar Bowl game last year, is back practically intact, with eight men who started the opener last season slated to go again.

B. C. ON SHORT END

In addition, it has come up with a passer in Sophomore Lou Thomas to erect a more diversified attack then presented in 1939. It's a rough assignment taking this outfit over the coals, and the betting is 5 to 3 the Eagles can't do it.

Boston College will not be faced with a weather handicap. It's New England weather and practically perfect for football. The temparture was in the low 60's this a. m. with the sky partly cloudy. A fresh breeze will make the choice of goals important.

Lou Montgomery will aid the radio broadcaster, calling the B. C. plays and players for him . . . Lowell "Red" Dawson, Tulane coach, gave a show of how football coaches should weep when asked about Tulane . . . "We will probably get whipped and soundly," he told the Boston interviewers . . . "We have nothing but green sophomores" . . . More than likely the only thing green about them will be their uniforms . . . The B. C.'s saw the Tulane freshmen in action, against Centenary, a bit of scouting for the return game here next year . . . They also saw Harley McCollum, All-America tackle, ineligible this season . . . He's big and capable looking and will be back in 1941.

Holy Cross Host To Providence

WORCESTER, Sept. 28 (AP)—A Holy Cross squad made up largely of 1939 "shock troops" faced Providence today in the opening game of the season.

Joe Osmanski, veteran Crusader back, was on the sidelines with an injured leg, leaving Capt. Jack Keller the only 1939 regular in the starting lineup.

A crowd of 15,000 was expected to see Holy Cross try for its 16th straight victory over the Friars.

Everett's Upstate Game Tops Schools

By SAM BROGNA

The second busiest week-end on the schoolboy football calendar will be brought to a close today as close to 40 games will be contested throughout the state.

Featured tilt of the crowded afternoon, by all means, is the Everett at Leominster clash. Even though the scene of this all-important engagement for both teams takes place upstate, all scholastic eyes are focused in that direction.

For best local attractions, however, Melrose's hocus-pocus eleven, winner over Revere High, 13 to 0, in last week's opener, will attempt to extend the enchantment over Medford's Mustange at the Fulton st. stadium; Marblehead, new coach and all, will appear at the Pearl st. yard for a tilt with Malden's inexperienced and green eleven; Cambridge Latin, with a losing streak of two straight, hikes over to Dilboy Field, where Luciano's Somervill outfit, which is anxious to ring up win No. 1, and Quincy meeting Brookline's hospitalized eleven at Brookline.

And for those who would like to go a little beyond these limits, say, for instance, Brockton, Gloucester, North Quincy, Lowell, and Saugus in the evening, they will have plenty to cheer about.

BITTERLY FOUGHT

Defending state champions Brockton plays its first home game against Mt. Pleasant of Providence; Gloucester entertains Lynn Classical; North Quincy takes advantage of its city rivals absence by moving into the Municipal Stadium for a clash with Dedham; Lowell will have its hands full with Arlington, and the rabid Newburyport turnpike town of Saugus will get its first glimpse of Buzz Harvey's Saugus team in action at home against Pawtucket in a night game.

The Waltham-Providence Central fray at the former's grounds also is expected to be bitterly fought game.

Everett High, sporting a potential championship aggregation, will make its first showing on the gridiron today. On paper, this Big Red wagon looms as the outfit which is expected to battle it out with Brockton for state honors.

Nice things have been said of Dennis Gildea and his eleven since the rotund mentor has been more fortunate than a majority of his rivals with returning material. The only thing now for Gildea to do is have his boys live up to this big buildup and produce. Whether they can, remains to be seen.

Coach Charley Broderick will throw a fast, fairly heavy eleven sprinkled with veterans and lettermen headed by a mighty antonomasia named Roger Robichaud against Everett. To date, two teams have fallen before this Leominster machine and in each game, Robichaud, a 137 pound of the niftiest backs to be seen on a schoolboy gridiron even though the campaign is still very young, was the spearhead of the attack.

STANDOUT

Against Maynard, Roger was the individual standout with his kicking, passing and best of all, his running. In the second game against Arlington, he was even greater and won the contest with the lone touchdown of the afternoon.

A New Kind of Sabotage

SOX PLAY A'S TWICE AT FENWAY

Still cherishing hope that the Red Sox will finish in the first division, though two games behind the White Sox, Manager Joe Cronin was to shoot veterans Joe Heving and Jack Wilson against the A's in the doubleheader at Fenway Park this afternoon.

Connie Mack's mound choices were Nelson Potter and Marchildon.

BIG GUNS HAVE RANGE

In the final game with the Senators here they set a season's record for plain and fancy clouting and scoring when they combed Monteagudo, Freeman and Krakauskas for 22 hits and 24 runs, while Fred Ostermueller was limiting the Nats to 11 hits and four runs.

200TH HIT FOR CRAMER

In the swatfest Dom DiMaggio got four hits, Doc Cramer three, which made him the first man in the majors to reach the 200-hit mark, and Tony Lupien, Harvard product, entering the game in the seventh, got two, one a triple.

Lupien's hitting has been devastating since he joined the Sox from Little Rock, and if the Sox don't make room for him in their 1941 plans, they will be overlooking another fine bet.

Stengel Tests Another Rookie Against Giants

NEW YORK, Sept. 28—Treading on air as a result of the showing of his rookies during the past week, Casey Stengel, manager of the Bees, announced this morning he probably would start Southpaw Art Johnson, late of Hartford, against the Giants this afternoon in the first game of a series of two which will close the season. If not Johnson, it would be Dick Errickson, Stengel said.

Hal Schumacher was the Giants' choice.

Johnson is a Winchester, Mass., boy. He and Frank Lamanna were the aces of the Hartford hill corps this season, and the club went far. It defeated Scranton, Red Sox farm, in the first round playoffs and then succumbed to Binghamton in the finals.

Both Johnson and Lamanna looked like the goods during the entire season, and Lamanna proved he had great possibilities in the majors Thursday when he defeated the second place Dodgers at Ebbets Field.

With youngsters like Sibby Sisti, Eddie Miller, Max West, Carvel Rowell and Chet Ross already established big leaguers, and the bunch of new kids around with all sorts of possibilities, Stengel can look forward to a pleasant winter because next season should be nothing but sunshine for the Bees.
